CREATING AN ARMY WITH THE MORTEM ET GLORIAM ARMY LISTS

Use the army lists to create your own customised armies using the Mortem et Gloriam Army Builder.

There are few general rules to follow:

1. An army must have at least 2 generals and can have no more than 4.
2. You must take at least the minimum of any troops noted and may not go beyond the maximum of any.
3. No army may have more than two generals who are Talented or better.
4. Unless specified otherwise, all elements in a UG must be classified identically. Unless specified otherwise, if an optional characteristic is taken, it must be taken by all the elements in the UG for which that optional characteristic is available.
5. Any UGs can be downgraded by one quality grade and/or by one shooting skill (Skilled to Experienced or Experienced to Unskilled) representing less strong, tired, or understrength troops. If any bases are downgraded all in the UG must be downgraded. So Average-Experienced skirmishers can always be downgraded to Poor-Unskilled.
6. Points are shown for troops with all mandatory characteristics applied. Points have been rounded to the nearest whole number. If quality or shooting skill is downgraded, then the points (including the points for any optional characteristics) will need to be adjusted.
7. An army entirely of Cavalry, Chariots, Camelry or Infantry with the Dismountable characteristic may choose the No Camp option.

Where allies are allowed, they must conform to the following rules:

1. An ally must be a minimum of 2 and a maximum of 4 UGs.
2. They must take enough UGs to get them to at least 50% of the minimums in the list being used.
3. They can thereafter take any troops up to the maximum to create the rest of the allied contingent.
4. Unless specified in the notes, the general must be the same type as the army commander in their own army's list but cannot be legendary.

Usually this results in 1-3 UGs being compulsory and you having full flexibility on the rest.

Where an internal ally is allowed, and no contingent is specified they must conform to the following rules:

1. Each internal ally must be a minimum of 2 and a maximum of 4 UGs.
2. The total number of troops taken of each type in the entire army must not exceed the maxima for that troop type.
3. They must take enough UGs to get them to at least 50% of the minimums in the list if there is enough allowance for a UG after the core army itself has taken the minimum. For example: An army has 4-12 cavalry (UG size 4,6) and 18-32 spearmen (UG size 6,8,9) as compulsory troops with 2 internal allies. The core army must take 4 cavalry and at least 18 spearmen. The first ally must take 4 cavalry and at least 9 spearmen. The second ally must take 4 cavalry but cannot take the 9 spearmen as this would exceed the 32 spearmen limit for the army.

4. If a list requires a proportion of a troop type to be upgraded or regraded, then the army as a whole must comply with this requirement. Internal allies do not have to comply these requirements. For example: $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{3}{4}$ of Turcomans must be upgraded from Experienced to Skilled shooting. An internal ally might have all Experienced as long as the army as a whole has $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{3}{4}$ Skilled.
5. They can thereafter take any troops up to the maximum to create the rest of the allied contingent.

Usually this results in 1-3 UGs being compulsory and you having full flexibility on the rest.

As a courtesy to your opponent when you deploy your troops, you should describe each UG fully; type, training, quality, protection, melee weaponry, shooting skill and weaponry and characteristics. You should also explain how any unusual troop types in your army function and any special rules including Stakes, Caltrops, Barricades and Obstacles and troop types such as Battle Wagons.

The easiest way to calculate points is to use the downloadable on-line army builder at www.mortem-et-gloriam.co.uk. Use this and all you do is use drop downs for the troop classifications and it does all the work for you. For those who prefer pen and paper, or who want to doodle some approximate designs before loading an army up, we have provided the points values with the lists. If a discrepancy exists in the points values between these lists and the army builder, then the army builder has the correct value.

FRIENDLY AND SCENARIO GAMES

Feel free to vary the troop classifications for friendly and scenario games. An interesting aspect of scenario games can be to see what the effect is from representing troops in a different manner.

HISTORICAL INTRODUCTION

At the start of our period, the Celts were the dominant tribal groupings throughout Gaul, Britain and Germany. The Celts had also expanded into northern Italy and Spain.

The Celts in Germany came under pressure from Germanic tribes who at this time were settled in southern Scandinavia. The Gauls, (Celts in France) came under pressure from the growing power of Rome. By the end of the Second Punic War (201 BCE) the Romans had secured their control over the whole of Italy south of the Alps. In order to provide a land link to their territories in Spain, the Romans also extended their control into southern France. Between 154 and 122 BCE Rome fought a series of wars against the Ligurians, Salluvi and Vocontii. In 121 BCE Cn. Domitius Ahenobarbus defeated the Allobroges then Q Fabius Maximus defeated an alliance of Allobroges and the Arveni. Both tribes surrendered. In 118 BCE Rome established a colony at Narbo and carved out the province of Gallia Narbonensis to connect Italy to Spain.

Around this time the Cimbri were migrating southwards from their homeland in modern Jutland. They received a hostile welcome from the tribes they encountered including the Boii, the Scordisci, the Teuristae and ended up in the homeland of the Taurisci. The Taurisci were allied to Rome and the consul Cn. Papirius Carbo was sent to investigate. Carbo intended to defeat the Cimbri, but a planned ambush backfired and saw the Romans badly defeated near Noreia (113 BCE). The Cimbri disappeared but in 109 BCE advanced down the Rhone valley. They were met by the army of M. Junius Silanus and defeated them. In the following year another Roman army was humiliated by the Tigurini. This led to a collapse of Roman authority in the region. Worse was to follow when in 105 BCE the Romans suffered one of their worst defeats against the Cimbri at Arausio. Perhaps 60,000 Romans and allies were killed, a similar loss to that at Cannae against Hannibal. It would take C. Marius and four years to defeat the Cimbri, Teutones and Ambrones.

Although regarded as German the Cimbri may have been Celtic. The Romans regarded everyone west of the Rhine as Gauls and everyone east of the Rhine as Germans. The conquest of Gaul was achieved by C. Julius Caesar in a series of wars between 58 and 50 BCE. It established the Rhine as the frontier and provided Caesar with the power base to launch the civil war that overthrew the power of the senate and established him as dictator. The devastation of Gaul was so comprehensive that apart from one revolt, Gaul was held securely throughout the subsequent civil wars that established Augustus as emperor of Rome.

Augustan policy appears to have been to attempt to conquer Germany at least to the river Elbe in an attempt to shorten the frontier. This aim was largely prevented by the defeat of Varus and the loss of three legions by Arminius in 9 CE. The Rhine became the permanent frontier for the next 400 years. During this period the nature of the German tribes changed. The population increased with more agriculture and the tribes became better armed.

Julius Caesar led two expeditionary forces to Britain, but it was the emperor Claudius, nearly 100 years later in 43 CE who was to send the first permanent invasion force. Rapid progress saw the conquest of southern Britain. The Welsh Silures tribe proved obstinate but were nearly subdued when the revolt of the Iceni led by Boudicca (60 CE) dealt a setback to the Romans. It was to take until 76 CE for the Romans to subdue the Silures. It was Agricola in campaigns from 78 to 84 CE who was to conquer the whole of Wales and northern England by defeating the Ordovices and Brigantes. Agricola then marched northwards into the highlands and defeated the Caledones at Mons Graupius.

The Romans were unable or unwilling to hold onto the north of Scotland. Hadrian's Wall protected the frontier. An attempt to extend control into southern Scotland by building the Antonine Wall was ultimately abandoned. In 209 CE Septimus Severus defeated the Caledonians and inflicted widespread destruction that led to the emergence of the Picts.

The Romans never attempted to conquer Ireland which at this time was controlled by the Scotti.

In the 4th century CE the German tribes were becoming more threatening. Armorica (modern Brittany) was subjected to frequent pirate attacks. The Roman response was to start settling tribes within the Roman Empire. These tribesmen became recruits for the Roman army and their leaders adopted Roman customs and started to secure positions within the Roman military. On 31 December 406 CE the Suevi, Vandals, Quadi and Alans crossed the Rhine and invaded Gaul. Some moved on into Spain. The Romans were to hold parts of Gaul for the next seventy years but the Western Roman Empire never established complete control again. In 410 CE Britain was told to look to its own defence.

MAXIMUS ARMY LISTS

CALCULATING POINTS

Army points are calculated as follows:

GENERALS - MAXIMUS

Type of general	Army Commander		Sub-general		Ally general
	Professional	Instinctive	Professional	Instinctive	Professional	Instinctive
Legendary	1600	1400	n/a	n/a	800	700
Talented	1100	900	850	700	650	600
Competent	700	550	600	450	300	250
Mediocre	250	0	400	250	100	50

CAMPS

Type of camp	Poor	Average	Superior
Unfortified	108	180	252
Fortified	216	360	504
Flexible	180	300	420
Mobile	126	210	294
No camp	378	N/A	N/A

A flexible camp is deployed as a fortified camp when defending and a mobile camp when invading.
No camp deploys a poor mobile camp when defending and no camp at all when invading.

UGs

For each UG multiply the cost shown in the list (adjusting for any optional characteristics) by the number of bases.

NOTES

1. Points values for skirmishers in Magna and Pacto are greater than in Maximus as SuGs shoot at full effect with only two ranks.
2. For further details on how points are calculated visit the Mortem et Gloriam website.

HIGHLAND GALLIC

400 TO 50 BCE

HISTORICAL NOTES

This list represents the armies of the highland tribes including the Helvetii, Arveni and Allobroges. It also represents the Ligures who may have been an Indo-European people rather than Celts.

TROOP NOTES

Gauls were equipped with short spears, javelins, and swords. Mail appears to have been a Celtic invention around 300 BCE but was restricted to the aristocracy. Shields were mainly oval, but hexagonal, rectangular, and round examples existed. The light infantry were primarily javelinmen, but archers and slingers were available. Soldurii were the household troops of chieftains.

LOWLAND GALLIC

400 TO 40 BCE

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Gauls were Celts that emerged around the 5th century BCE. During the 4th century BCE they expanded into northern Italy, contributing to the decline of the Etruscan empire. The rising Roman Republic after the end of the First Punic War increasingly put pressure on the Gallic sphere of influence; the Battle of Telamon of 225 BCE heralded a gradual decline of Gallic power over the 2nd century, until the eventual conquest of Gaul in the Gallic Wars of the 50s BCE. This list represents the armies of the lowland tribes.

TROOP NOTES

Gauls were equipped with short spears, javelins, and swords. Mail appears to have been a Celtic invention around 300 BCE but was restricted to the aristocracy. Shields were mainly oval, but hexagonal, rectangular, and round examples existed.

There were four troop types attested, chariots, cavalry, heavy infantry and light infantry. The chariots were drawn by two horses and carried a driver and a warrior. They were used against cavalry and restricted to skirmishing against infantry. Cavalry replaced chariots in Italy and Gaul but continued to be used in Britain. The light infantry were primarily javelinmen, but archers and slingers were available.

Soldurii were the household troops of a Chieftain. The largest known contingent was 600 men in Caesar's description of the Aquitanii.

Gaesati were troops who were paid to fight the Romans. They may have been mercenaries or warriors of a specific tribe. They may have fought naked, a custom that most Gauls had abandoned by this time. At Telamon they suffered from Roman javelins hence the Unprotected classification.

EARLY GERMAN

400 BCE TO 219 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Germans were a group of tribes that originated in Denmark and southern Scandinavia. By the 3rd century BCE they had expanded southwards. The first contact with Rome was in 113 BCE during the migration of the Cimbri. A combined force of Cimbri and Teutoni defeated Roman armies in 109 BCE and 105 BCE. They were defeated by Marius at the battle of Vercellae in 101 BCE.

Julius Caesar encountered more German tribes during his conquest of Gaul and it was at this time that the Rhine became the frontier of the Roman empire. During the Augustan period the Romans expanded towards the river Elbe. A revolt in 9 CE led by the supposed Roman ally Arminius led to the destruction of three Roman legions in the battle of Teutoburger Wald. This firmly established the frontier on the line of the rivers Rhine and Danube. Later in the century the Romans conquered the Rhine-Danube salient which they held until c. 260 CE.

TROOP NOTES

German refers to tribes that originated beyond the river Rhine. Many tribes were ethnically Celtic and they fought in a similar fashion to the Gauls.

German cavalry seems to have been generally better regarded than Gallic cavalry. Warriors are recorded as accompanying the cavalry by hanging on to the horse's manes.

The Chatti were reported as more ferocious than other tribes. Caesar does not mention them. The Chatti may have been the Suebi or displaced them.

If refighting the Battle of Teutoburger Wald in 9 AD then it would be appropriate to allow the Germans Barricades. This doesn't appear to be a regular tactic so is not included in the list.

ANCIENT BRITISH

60 BCE TO 90 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Ancient British were an ancient Celtic people. Julius Caesar invaded the British Isles in 55 and 54 BCE, but it was almost another hundred years before the Romans launched another invasion in 43 CE. The British were defeated in a series of battles and the south of Britain was rapidly conquered. Over succeeding decades, the Romans moved north and west. In 61 CE the Iceni revolted led by Queen Boudicca. In 70 CE the Brigantes and Parisi were brought into the Empire. Wales was conquered by 78 CE.

TROOP NOTES

The Ancient British were Celtic and fought in a similar style to the Gauls. They retained the chariot. Cavalry appears to have fought as skirmishers. The Romans encountered many slingers, particularly in the sieges of the hill-forts of south west Britain.

HISTORICAL ENEMIES

SCOTS-IRISH

50 TO 450 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

Scoti or Scotti was a name used by Late Roman authors for the Irish. From the 4th century CE onwards, they represented a growing threat to Roman Briton due to their raiding. Scoti subsequently settled in Scotland.

TROOP NOTES

Irish infantry equipment was lighter than that of the other Celtic nations, comprising a short light sword, a small shield, and light javelins. Fierce troops might include warriors recruited from "Britain". Lugaid Mac Con seized the high kingship with the help of recruited Britons.

BATAVIAN REVOLT

69 TO 70 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

During the disturbances that followed the death of Nero, a Batavian Gaius Julius Civilis took up arms under pretence of siding with Vespasian and induced the inhabitants of his native country to rebel. The Batavians had been exempted from tribute but were obliged to supply many men for the army. The Batavians were immediately joined by several neighbouring German tribes. Two legions under Mummius Lupercus were defeated at Castra Vetera and surrounded. Eight cohorts of Batavian veterans joined their countrymen. This led to a rising in Gaul.

Vespasian was forced to send a strong force to quash the revolt. Civilis was defeated at Augusta Treverorum and Castra Vetera and forced to withdraw to the island of the Batavians. An agreement was reached and the Batavians resumed amicable relations with Rome.

TROOP NOTES

The Batavian Auxilia would have been equipped and trained as other Roman auxilia.

CALEDONIAN

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Caledonian Confederacy comprised several Celtic tribes in modern Scotland. They were defeated by the Romans under Gn. Julius Agricola in 84 CE. The Romans subsequently established Hadrian's Wall and for short period the Antonine Wall. The Caledonian tribes remained a threat. In 209 CE Septimius Severus defeated the Caledonians and inflicted widespread destruction. This contributed to the emergence of the Picts.

TROOP NOTES

The Caledonians appear to have fought in a similar fashion to the other Ancient British tribes.

HISTORICAL ENEMIES

Ancient British 2304; Scots-Irish 2305; Caledonian 2307; Early Imperial Roman 2516.

CALEDONIAN TRIBES

Caledonian tribes included the Caledones, Taexali, Vacomagi and Venicones. Pliny also mentions the Carnonacae, Carini, Cateni, Cornovii, Creones, Decanatae, Epidii, Lugi, Maeatae and Smertae.

BATTLES AND CAMPAIGNS

PICTS

215 TO 500 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Picts were a tribal confederation of peoples who lived in what is today eastern and northern Scotland. They are thought to have been a Caledonian tribe who emerged after the Caledonian tribes were defeated by Septimius Severus. During the 4th century CE, they emerged as one of the threats to Roman Britain.

TROOP NOTES

The Picts fought in a similar fashion to the Caledonians. Many warriors appear to have been lightly equipped. It is possible that Attacotti were recruited into the Roman army. They might have originated on the island of Ireland.

EARLY FRANKS

220 TO 484 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Franks were a confederation of Germanic tribes that was originally composed of a mix of groups settled between the Rhine and the Weser Rivers. The two most prominent of these tribes were the Ripuarians and the Salians who led the others. The Franks appear in Latin sources for the first time in 257 CE, mentioned among the enemies of Rome in northern Gaul. They were a threat not only by land but also on the sea. Late in the 3rd century, some of the Franks joined the Saxons, turning into raiders in the southern part of the North Sea and the English Channel, preying on shipping lanes, and raiding the coast of Britain and Gaul. Under the rule of Emperor Maximianus in 287, the Romans signed a treaty with the Franks; as part of the agreement, Franks were enlisted in the Roman army.

In 451, Attila the Hun invaded Gaul, and the Franks joined the Romans and the Visigoths to resist the invasion. Attila's conquest was halted in June at the Battle of the Catalaunian Plains, and he retreated from Gaul. The Franks continued to provide military support to Rome to fight against imperial enemies, including the Visigoths in 463 and the Saxons at Angers in 469.

TROOP NOTES

The Frankish warriors used the francisca throwing axe and a heavy throwing spear called the angon. According to Ammianus they "enter eagerly into wars", are stronger and taller than Roman soldiers, of huge size, savage and uncontrollable and exhibit extreme resolution. He also describes the elite warriors as a fiery band of nobles among whom even the kings fought, fighting in frenzied rage and leaving themselves unguarded and striving to lavish their lives for victory.

BURGUNDI

HISTORICAL NOTES

In the late 3rd century CE, the Burgundians appear on the east bank of the Rhine, confronting Roman Gaul. Zosimus reports them being defeated by the emperor Probus in 278 CE in Gaul. At this time, they were led by a Vandal king. A few years later, Claudius Mamertinus mentions them along with the Alamanni, a Suebic people. These two peoples had moved into the Agri Decumates on the eastern side of the Rhine, an area today referred to still as Swabia, at times attacking Roman Gaul together and sometimes fighting each other. He also mentions that the Goths had previously defeated the Burgundians.

In 370 CE, the Emperor Valentinian I enlisted the aid of the Burgundians in his war against the Alamanni. Approximately four decades later, the Burgundians appear again. Following Stilicho's withdrawal of troops to fight Alaric I the Visigoth, the northern tribes crossed the Rhine and entered the Empire in the Völkerwanderung, or Germanic migrations. Some Burgundians migrated westwards, were crushed by the Huns at Roman instigation in 436 CE and settled as foederati in the Roman province of Germania Secunda along the Middle Rhine. Other Burgundians stayed in their previous homeland in Oder-Vistula interfluvial and formed a contingent in Attila's Hunnic army.

TROOP NOTES

The Burgundi differed from the Franks and Suevi in using light javelins instead of francisca, angon or bebrae.

ALAMANNI

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Alamanni are first mentioned by Cassius Dio in the context of the campaign of Caracalla of 213 CE. The Alamanni captured the Agri Decumates in 260 CE, and later expanded into present-day Alsace, and northern Switzerland. The Alamanni were conquered by Frankish leader Clovis and incorporated into his dominions.

TROOP NOTES

The Alamanni appear to have used more archers than other German tribes.

FRISII

220 TO 734 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Frisii were native to the coastal parts of the Netherlands and Germany. They are recorded as early as 12 BCE. In 296 CE some were settled into Roman territory as laeti. In the 6th century they received an influx of Angle and Saxon settlers. In the 7th century they expanded southwards. In the 8th century they came into increasing conflict with the Franks to their south and were subjugated in 734 CE.

TROOP NOTES

The Frisii may have fought in a similar manner to the Saxons.

OLD SAXON

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Saxons were first mentioned as living near the North Sea coast of what is now Old Saxony. They and the Angles are associated with the invasions at the end of Roman Britain. An uprising in 555 CE was suppressed by Chlothar I. The Thuringians frequently appeared as allies of the Saxons. They were decisively conquered by Charlemagne in a long series of annual campaigns between 772 and 804 CE.

TROOP NOTES

The Saxons fought exclusively on foot. Nobles may have ridden horses to battle and then dismounted.

SUEVI

400 TO 584 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Suevi are first mentioned by Julius Caesar. Suevi was a collective term for the German tribes of the upper Danube. The Suevi included some Alamanni. They invaded across the frozen Rhine in 406 CE, crossed into Spain in 409 CE at the same time as the Vandals and some of the Alans and set up a kingdom in its north-west corner (Gallaecia). The Suevi were absorbed by the Visigoths in 584 CE.

TROOP NOTES

The Suevi may have had a similar fighting style to the Alamanni.

HISTORICAL ENEMIES

RUGII

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Rugii were first mentioned by Tacitus. They may have migrated from the southern Baltic Coast in the 2nd century CE. They took part in Attila's campaigns in 451. After the collapse of the Hunnic empire, they appear to have occupied part of lower Austria, north of the Danube. Some Rugii were defeated by Odoacer's relic Roman mercenary army while invading Illyria in 487 CE. Others appear to have joined Theodoric's invasion of Italy in 489 CE.

TROOP NOTES

The Rugii may have fought in a similar fashion to the Franks.

GALLIC FOEDERATE ROMAN

HISTORICAL NOTES

Following the assassination of Marjorian, the Western Roman Empire fell apart rapidly. Aegidius, the Magister Militum per Gallias, refused to acknowledge the Emperors after Marjorian and set up a state north of the Loire. After the death of Aegidius in 464 or 465 CE the Franks under Childeric may have taken over much of the army. The son of Aegidius, Sygarius, held on to some territory around Soissons, until his defeat by Clovis in 486 CE.

TROOP NOTES

By this stage, any "Roman" troops would have been mostly recruited from barbarians. Bucellarii were the personal troops of a major warlord.

HISTORICAL ENEMIES

Early Franks 2309; Gallic Foederate Roman 2318; Tolosan Visigoth 3401; Armorican or Early Breton 3402; Early Merovingian Frank 3404.
