ARMY LISTS

SYRIA AND ASIA MINOR

Edited by Richard Jeffrey-Cook. Contributions from Simon Hall, Nik Gaukroger and Lance Flint. Front image by Simon Clarke.

CONTENTS

The lists are divided into three sections, Maximus, Magna and Pacto. Within each section are the following lists:

2801	Asiatic Greek	670 to 48 BCE
2802	Lycian	525 to 300 BCE
2803	Bithynian	435 to 74 BCE
2804	Armenian	330 BCE to 627 CE
2805	Asiatic Successor	323 to 280 BCE
2806	Eumenid	321 to 316 BCE
2807	Caucasian Iberian	302 BCE to 591 CE
2808	Cappadocian	300 BCE to 17 CE
2809	Attalid Pergamene	282 to 129 BCE
2810	Galatian	280 to 62 BCE
2811	Early Seleucid	279 to 167 BCE
2812	Seleucid	166 to 129 BCE
2813	Commagene	163 BCE to 72 CE
2814	Late Seleucid	128 to 63 BCE
2815	Pontic	110 to 47 BCE
2816	Palmyran	258 to 273 CE

CREATING AN ARMY WITH THE MORTEM ET GLORIAM ARMY LISTS

Use the army lists to create your own customised armies using the Mortem et Gloriam Army Builder.

There are few general rules to follow:

1. An army must have at least 2 generals and can have no more than 4.
2. You must take at least the minimum of any troops noted and may not go beyond the maximum of any.
3. No army may have more than two generals who are Talented or better.
4. Unless specified otherwise, all elements in a UG must be classified identically. Unless specified otherwise, if an optional characteristic is taken, it must be taken by all the elements in the UG for which that optional characteristic is available.
5. Any UGs can be downgraded by one quality grade and/or by one shooting skill (Skilled to Experienced or Experienced to Unskilled) representing less strong, tired, or understrength troops. If any bases are downgraded all in the UG must be downgraded. So Average-Experienced skirmishers can always be downgraded to Poor-Unskilled.
6. Points are shown for troops with all mandatory characteristics applied. Points have been rounded to the nearest whole number. If quality or shooting skill is downgraded, then the points (including the points for any optional characteristics) will need to be adjusted.
7. An army entirely of Cavalry, Chariots, Camelry or Infantry with the Dismountable characteristic may choose the No Camp option.

Where allies are allowed, they must conform to the following rules:

1. An ally must be a minimum of 2 and a maximum of 4 UGs.
2. They must take enough UGs to get them to at least 50% of the minimums in the list being used.
3. They can thereafter take any troops up to the maximum to create the rest of the allied contingent.
4. Unless specified in the notes, the general must be the same type as the army commander in their own army's list but cannot be legendary.

Usually this results in 1-3 UGs being compulsory and you having full flexibility on the rest.

Where an internal ally is allowed, and no contingent is specified they must conform to the following rules:

1. Each internal ally must be a minimum of 2 and a maximum of 4 UGs.
2. The total number of troops taken of each type in the entire army must not exceed the maxima for that troop type.
3. They must take enough UGs to get them to at least 50% of the minimums in the list if there is enough allowance for a UG after the core army itself has taken the minimum. For example: An army has 4-12 cavalry (UG size 4,6) and 18-32 spearmen (UG size 6,8,9) as compulsory troops with 2 internal allies. The core army must take 4 cavalry and at least 18 spearmen. The first ally must take 4 cavalry and at least 9 spearmen. The second ally must take 4 cavalry but cannot take the 9 spearmen as this would exceed the 32 spearmen limit for the army.

4. If a list requires a proportion of a troop type to be upgraded or regraded, then the army as a whole must comply with this requirement. Internal allies do not have to comply these requirements. For example: $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{3}{4}$ of Turcomans must be upgraded from Experienced to Skilled shooting. An internal ally might have all Experienced as long as the army as a whole has $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{3}{4}$ Skilled.
5. They can thereafter take any troops up to the maximum to create the rest of the allied contingent.

Usually this results in 1-3 UGs being compulsory and you having full flexibility on the rest.

As a courtesy to your opponent when you deploy your troops, you should describe each UG fully; type, training, quality, protection, melee weaponry, shooting skill and weaponry and characteristics. You should also explain how any unusual troop types in your army function and any special rules including Stakes, Caltrops, Barricades and Obstacles and troop types such as Battle Wagons.

The easiest way to calculate points is to use the downloadable on-line army builder at www.mortem-et-gloriam.co.uk. Use this and all you do is use drop downs for the troop classifications and it does all the work for you. For those who prefer pen and paper, or who want to doodle some approximate designs before loading an army up, we have provided the points values with the lists. If a discrepancy exists in the points values between these lists and the army builder, then the army builder has the correct value.

FRIENDLY AND SCENARIO GAMES

Feel free to vary the troop classifications for friendly and scenario games. An interesting aspect of scenario games can be to see what the effect is from representing troops in a different manner.

HISTORICAL INTRODUCTION

Syria and Asia Minor were captured by the Achaemenid Persians in the 6th century BCE. Sardis, the former capital of the Lydian empire, became the chief city of their western empire. Asia Minor (modern Asiatic Turkey) was a patchwork of kingdoms which the Persians ruled through their system of satraps.

Some of the kingdoms within Asia Minor, although nominally under Persian rule, maintained a high degree of independence. Lycia, an ancient kingdom in the south west briefly became members of the Athenian empire. In 429 BCE, Athens sent an expedition against Lycia to try to force it to re-join the league. This failed when Lycia's leader Gergis of Xanthos defeated General Melasander.

Bithynia in the north west also maintained a high degree of independence. The Bithynians were a Thracian people.

The conquest of the Persian empire by Alexander the Great removed the Persians as rulers but did not affect Asia Minor greatly. Alexander did not spend a great amount of time in Asia Minor. He landed in May 334 BCE and spent less than 18 months there and never returned. He made his own appointments as satraps but left the Persian system of government largely unaltered. Alexander's victory at Issus consolidated his hold on Asia Minor and Syria. Syria at this time was relatively unimportant.

The death of Alexander in 323 BCE left his empire up for grabs by his generals. Eumenes of Cardia, the former secretary of Alexander, fought a series of campaigns against Antigonus One-Eyed. He was eventually betrayed by his own troops and Antigonus established his power base in Asia Minor. He became so powerful that Lysimachus, Ptolemy, Seleucus and Cassander formed an alliance against him. In 301 BCE he was defeated and killed at the Battle of Ipsus. Asia Minor was divided between the victors, Seleucus and Lysimachus, with Seleucus holding the east and Lysimachus the west.

Some of the Persian dynasts who had survived Alexander's conquests were able to re-establish their control. Both the Orontid dynasty in Armenia and the Ariarathid dynasty in Cappadocia re-established control after overthrowing Macedonian governors.

Although holding Babylon and the eastern satrapies, Seleucus established the heart of his kingdom in Syria. He established a chain of cities for military settlers. Antioch, established by his son and successor Antiochus I became the capital of the Seleucid west. Seleucus went on to defeat Lysimachus at the Battle of Corupedium in 281 BCE. Seleucus was assassinated a few months later. Antiochus struggled to gain control over the Lysimachid territories that he inherited from his father. A victory over the Galatians, a group of Celtic tribes that had overrun Macedonia and Asia Minor, helped to establish his control, but it was not enough to prevent Eumenes of Pergamum declaring himself independent.

The death of Antiochus I led to the Seleucid empire being divided between his sons. The eldest son, Seleucus II, controlled most of the Seleucid empire, but the younger son Antiochus Hierax maintained a kingdom in Asia Minor until driven out by Eumenes.

The reign of Antiochus III (222 to 187 BCE) saw a revival in Seleucid fortunes until he waged war against Rome. The Romans decisively defeated him at Magnesia in 189 BCE and gave their ally, Eumenes II, the Seleucid territories in Asia Minor. The Seleucid kingdom became involved in a struggle to retain their eastern satrapies from the Parthians. In 163 BCE, the satrap of Commagene, Ptolemaeus, established himself as independent ruler following the death of the Seleucid king, Antiochus IV Epiphanes. The defeat of Antiochus VII Sidetes by Phraates of Parthia established Parthian control over the eastern satrapies and Babylonia. Continual civil wars reduced the Seleucid kingdom to a rump in Syria.

From this time on politics in Asia Minor was increasingly dominated by the Romans. The kings of Pergamum and Bithynia both bequeathed their kingdoms to the Romans. Against the Romans emerged one of the great characters of history, Mithridates of Pontus. Pontus was originally part of the Cappadocian kingdom but during the 4th century BCE a local dynasty had established itself. Mithridates took advantage of the chaos during the Social War in Italy to invade the Roman province of Asia and then Greece. The First Mithridatic War, fought between 88 and 84 BCE, saw Lucius Cornelius Sulla force Mithridates VI out of Greece proper. Sulla needed to return to Italy so a treaty was hastily arranged. As Sulla returned to Italy Lucius Licinius Murena was left in charge of Roman forces in Anatolia. The lenient peace treaty, which was never ratified by the Senate, allowed Mithridates VI to recoup his forces. Murena attacked Mithridates in 83 BCE, provoking the Second Mithridatic War from 83 BCE to 81 BCE. Mithridates scored a victory over Murena's green forces before peace was again declared by treaty. When Rome attempted to annex Bithynia (bequeathed to Rome by its last king) nearly a decade later, Mithridates VI attacked with an even larger army, leading to the Third Mithridatic War from 73 to 63 BCE. First Lucullus and then Pompey were sent against Mithridates. Mithridates was defeated and fled with a small army to Colchis and then the Crimea where he committed suicide.

Roman control over Asia Minor was fully established by Augustus. For the next four hundred years the region was held by the Romans with one short interruption. By the third century CE, Palmyra was a prosperous regional centre reaching the apex of its power in the 260s, when Palmyrene King Odaenathus defeated Persian Emperor Shapur I. The king was succeeded by regent Queen Zenobia, who rebelled against Rome and established the Palmyrene Empire which briefly encompassed the Roman provinces of Syria Palaestina, Arabia Petraea, Egypt and large parts of Asia Minor. In 273 CE, Roman emperor Aurelian destroyed Palmyra.

MAXIMUS ARMY LISTS

CALCULATING POINTS

Army points are calculated as follows:

GENERALS - MAXIMUS

Type of general	Army Commander		Sub-general		Ally general
	Professional	Instinctive	Professional	Instinctive	Professional	Instinctive
Legendary	1600	1400	n/a	n/a	800	700
Talented	1100	900	850	700	650	600
Competent	700	550	600	450	300	250
Mediocre	250	0	400	250	100	50

CAMPS

Type of camp	Poor	Average	Superior
Unfortified	108	180	252
Fortified	216	360	504
Flexible	180	300	420
Mobile	126	210	294
No camp	378	N/A	N/A

A flexible camp is deployed as a fortified camp when defending and a mobile camp when invading.
No camp deploys a poor mobile camp when defending and no camp at all when invading.

UGs

For each UG multiply the cost shown in the list (adjusting for any optional characteristics) by the number of bases.

NOTES

1. Points values for skirmishers in Magna and Pacto are greater than in Maximus as SuGs shoot at full effect with only two ranks.
2. For further details on how points are calculated visit the Mortem et Gloriam website.

ASIATIC GREEK

670 TO 48 BCE

HISTORICAL NOTES

This list covers the Greek states on the Black Sea coast, in Asia Minor and Cyprus.

The Greek cities in Asia Minor remained largely independent under the Lydian empire. They were conquered by the Persians in 547 BCE and “liberated” by Alexander the Great in 334. They then fell under the rule of Antigonos, Seleucus and Lysimachus. The Seleucid empire maintained control over much of Asia Minor in the 3rd century but the Ptolemies controlled parts of Asia Minor during the 3rd and 2nd century. After the Battle of Magnesia in 190 the Attalid kingdom of Pergamon ruled the western portion of Asia Minor until the kingdom was bequeathed to the Roman Republic in 133.

TROOP NOTES

The Greeks retained their traditional hoplite style of fighting, sometimes supplemented by local mercenaries.

LYCIAN

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Lycians are known to history since the records of ancient Egypt and the Hittite empire. They were a client state under the Achaemenid Persians and intermittently became a free agent. Briefly allied to the Athenians they were under Persian control then revolted and subsequently conquered by Masusolus, satrap of Caria. When the Persians were defeated by Alexander the Great, they fell under Macedonian control. In 188 BCE they were given to Rhodes by the Romans and then in 168 BCE set up as an independent league. In 43 CE they were incorporated into the Roman empire.

TROOP NOTES

Infantry: Lycian infantry fought with javelins and short thrusting spears. The Lycians also carried the Drepanon, a sickle shaped hand weapon like a falx or rhomphaia. Infantry in the Greek cities of Lycia fought as hoplites or later as thureophoroi. At the battle of Magnesia they are described as peltasts.

HISTORICAL ENEMIES

RULERS

The Lycian dynasty was probably established by the Achaemenid Persians. Sources on the Lycian dynasts are fragmentary. Names are in Lycian unless otherwise indicated. Some local rulers also minted coins.

Kheziga I	c.525 BCE
Kubernis (Greek name.)	c.520 – 480
Kuprilli	c.480 – 440
Kheriga	c.440 – 410

Arttumpara (Ruled in western Lycia)	c.380 – 360
Perikle (Ruler in eastern Lycia, then victor over Arttumpara)	c.375 – 362

From 362 to 333 Lycia was ruled by Persian satraps in Caria. It was conquered by Alexander the Great. By 304 it was ruled by Antigonos. After the death of Antigonos in 301 it was ruled by Lysimachus.

BITHYNIAN

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Bithynians were a Thracian people who settled in Asia Minor on the opposite side of the Bosphorus. They established their independence prior to the arrival of Alexander the Great. The kingdom became increasingly hellenized. In 278 BCE Nicomedes I invited the Galatians to Asia Minor to help in a dynastic struggle against his brother. The last king Nicomedes IV was expelled by Mithridates VI of Pontus. After being restored to the throne he bequeathed his kingdom through his will to the Romans in 74 BCE.

TROOP NOTES

The Bithynians were related to the Thracians and fought in a similar fashion. Bithynia became increasingly hellenized and adopted Greek methods of warfare.

ARMENIAN

330 BCE TO 627 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

The kingdom of Armenia started as a satrapy of the Achaemenid empire of Persia. It was only superficially affected by the conquests of Alexander the Great. It maintained an autonomous status under the Seleucid empire and during this period absorbed Hellenistic influences. In 188 BCE Artaxias unified and enlarged the Armenian kingdom. During the reign of Tigranes the Great (95 BCE to 55 BCE) the kingdom was at the zenith of its power and briefly became the most powerful state to the Roman east controlling Mesopotamia and Syria. Roman involvement in Asia Minor brought Tigranes' empire to an end. Armenia was to become a buffer state between Rome and Parthia. It was partitioned between Rome and Sassanid Persia in 386 CE, but the Sassanid part remained semi-independent. The emperor Heraclius conquered the remaining parts of Armenia in 627 CE.

TROOP NOTES

The Armenians were influenced by their Persian overlords. Armenian contingents are mentioned in Persian armies. Xenophon encountered Armenians during the march of the ten thousand. The first description of an Armenian army is when Lucullus encountered the army of Tigranes the Great.

Cavalry: The Armenians employed Cataphracts. These are assumed to have been introduced at the time when the Seleucids nominally ruled Armenia. Prior to this time it is assumed they used Persian arms and tactics.

Horse archers: Were used by the time of Tigranes and may have existed back to Persian times.

Infantry: The Armenians were described as fierce by Xenophon. They were probably hill tribesmen with javelins or bows.

Tigranes acquired Phalangites from his control of Syrian territories. After encountering the Romans, troops were trained in the Roman fashion.

HISTORICAL NOTES

When Alexander the Great died there was almost immediately a dispute among the generals as to whom his successor should be. Initially Perdiccas was regent, but he was assassinated by his officers after he marched to attack Ptolemy who had seized Egypt. By the treaty of Triparadisus (321 BCE) Antipater was appointed as supreme regent. He appointed Antigonos to continue the war against Eumenes (who had supported Perdiccas). Antipater died shortly afterwards leaving the regency to Polyperchon. Polyperchon returned to Macedonia.

Antigonos had Eumenes killed after capturing him following the battle of Gabiene in 316 BCE. This left Antigonos as the most powerful ruler in Asia. In 312 BCE Seleucus returned to Babylon from where he had been forced to flee by Antigonos. During the next 10 years he consolidated his position in the East. In 303 BCE he made peace with the Indian emperor Chandragupta Maurya for which he received 500 war elephants. These would play a decisive part in the battle of Ipsus in 301 BCE. This victory secured the position of Seleucus in Asia and founded the Seleucid empire. In 281 BCE Seleucus defeated Lysimachus at the battle of Corupedium, but upon arriving in Thrace was assassinated by Ptolemy Ceraunus.

TROOP NOTES

The Successors to Alexander in the East suffered from a shortage of phalangites. Pantadapoi were Persian and other native troops trained to fight as phalangites. They also relied on the large number of Greek mercenaries which Alexander had settled in the East as well as native troops.

Peucestas brought a large contingent of Persian archers and slingers to join the army of Eumenes.

EUMENID

HISTORICAL NOTES

Eumenes of Cardia was Alexander’s personal secretary. He supported Perdiccas after the death of Alexander and as satrap of Cappadocia defeated Craterus and Neoptolemus (satrap of Armenia) at the Hellespont in 321 BCE.

After the death of Perdiccas in 320 BCE, Eumenes was condemned to death at the conference at Triparadisus. He portrayed himself as loyal to the Argead House. Pursued by Antigonus, he fought a series of battles most notably at Paraitacene and at Gabiene. At Gabiene the baggage and families of the veteran Silver Shields fell into the hands of Antigonus. To reclaim their property, they handed Eumenes over to Antigonus who had him executed.

TROOP NOTES

As satrap of Cappadocia, Eumenes acquired a substantial cavalry force He then subsequently acquired the allegiance of the Silver Shields in 319 BCE. Unfortunately, he never acquired the same loyalty from his subordinate commanders hence they are classified as Instinctive.

CAUCASIAN IBERIAN

302 BCE to 591 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

The tribes of Colchis and Iberia in the Caucasus Mountains, not to be confused with Spain, resisted Achaemenid Persian rule for 300 years.

Colchis was situated on the eastern coast of the Black Sea and is known in Greek mythology as the home of the Golden Fleece. The tribes in Southern Colchis formed a Persian satrapy but overthrew Persian authority. Colchis later became part of the Iberian kingdom.

At the start of the fourth century BCE, the Kartli under Pharnazav I united the Iberian tribes. According to much later sources, he established a system of seven eristavis, like Persian or Greek satrapies. Iberian kings apparently maintained links with Sarmatian, Armenian and Seleucid kings.

Iberia was ruled by the Armenian Artaxiads from 90 to 30 BCE while Colchis was ruled by Mithridates VI of Pontus. Colchis then became a Bosporan possession until 63 CE when it was incorporated into the Roman province of Galatia. Under the Romans it retained partial autonomy and the Lazi tribe came to dominate, establishing the vassal kingdom of Lazica under the Byzantine empire.

During the first century CE, the Iberian kingdom emerged as a more powerful state that interfered in the affairs of Armenia, taking advantage of the contention between Rome and Parthia. The Iberians then sought Roman help to defend the Iberian frontiers from the Alans.

With the help of Volgases II, the Iberian nobles appear to have overthrown Amazasp II and installed an Arsacid ruler on the throne. The Arsacids were replaced by the Sassanid Chosroid dynasty until abolished by the Sassanids around 580 CE.

The Kingdom of Lazica emerged as a vassal of the Byzantine Empire in the 5th century CE. The Persians recognised Lazica as part of the Byzantine sphere of influence in 532 CE. In 536 the Byzantines annexed Lazica which led to a full-scale uprising in 541 and the Lazicans seeking Persian assistance. Khosrow I entered Lazica and conquered the kingdom. Persian rule proved more unpopular than Byzantine rule and the Lazicans revolted from Persian rule in 548, this time seeking Byzantine assistance. The war dragged on until 557 when a truce was agreed. A "Fifty Years Peace" was agreed in 562.

TROOP NOTES

The Iberians appear to have been influenced by their Alan and Sarmatian neighbours to the north. Iberian lancers are attested in the army of Mithridates VI of Pontus. Horse archers and significant numbers of infantry are recorded fighting the Parthians.

CAPPADOCIAN

HISTORICAL NOTES

Cappadocia became an independent kingdom under Ariarthes I in 332 BCE as the Persian empire fell to the Macedonians. Macedonian rule was established by Perdiccas and Eumenes but after Eumenes died the adopted son Ariarthes II recovered the kingdom. In the latter part of the 2nd century BCE the kingdom fell under the influence of Pontus. In 93 BCE the Armenian king, Tigranes the Great, invaded and placed a client king Gordios on the throne. When Rome defeated Tigranes, the kingdom became a client state of Rome, eventually being incorporated as a Roman province in 17 CE.

This list also covers Pontus from establishing independence in 281 until 113 and the reign of Mithridates VI

ATTALID PERGAMENE

282 TO 129 BCE

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Attalid dynasty of Pergamon started because the city was selected as the repository for 9000 talents accumulated by Lysimachus and placed in charge of a warden Philetaerus. He switched sides, declaring for Seleucus, contributing to the Seleucid victory at Corupedium in 281 BCE. Philetaerus died in 263 BCE having adopted a nephew, Eumenes as his heir. From this point the Attalids maintained independence against the Seleucid empire. They also obtained several victories over the Galatians who were a constant threat. Eumenes II allied with Rome, first against Macedon and then against the Seleucids. The defeat of Antiochus III at Magnesia in 190 BCE led to the Attalid dynasty controlling a large portion of Asia Minor. Attalus III died bequeathing the kingdom to Rome. A revolt in 129 BCE was put down and the Roman province of Asia was established.

TROOP NOTES

The Attalid army was largely reliant on mercenaries.

Phalanx: There is no direct evidence for the use of a Macedonian phalanx by the Attalids. However, phalanxes were raised by Antiogonus and Lysimachus in the preceding decades. The sources refer to "peltasts" and although it is likely that these were skirmishers, it is also possible that "peltast" could refer to phalangites. The Pergamene contingent in the Roman army at Magnesia appears to have been a token force, rather than the main Pergamene army.

Galatians: Hiring Galatian mercenaries was one way to prevent them raiding your territory. At least one group of mercenaries proved unreliable and turned against their paymasters.

Levy: The Greek cities could raise a militia for defence.

Elephants: The Pergamenes acquired some elephants captured from the Seleucids.

GALATIAN

280 TO 62 BCE

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Galatians originated as part of a Celtic migration which invaded Macedon and Greece. The original Celts who settled in Galatia came from Thrace at the invitation of Nicomedes of Bithynia in 278 BCE to assist him in a dynastic dispute. Once their contract with Nicomedes was fulfilled they systematically raided throughout western Asia Minor. They were defeated by Antiochus I in his "elephant victory" in 275 BCE. The Galatians settled in central Anatolia in a territory which became known as Galatia. The Romans inflicted a severe defeat on the Galatians in 189 BCE. In Pompey's settlement of 64 BCE, they became a client-state of the Roman empire. Around 25 BCE Augustus incorporated Galatia into the Roman empire.

TROOP NOTES

The Galatians appear to have used traditional Celtic methods of fighting. The devastation they caused after they initially broke into Macedonia led to a fearsome reputation. This declined somewhat but they were still sought after as mercenaries.

EARLY SELEUCID

279 TO 167 BCE

HISTORICAL NOTES

At the death of Seleucus I, the Seleucid kingdom held territories from Thrace to the borders of India. His son, Antiochus I retained most of the Asiatic territory, but the kingdom was difficult to control and gradually the further parts of the empire seceded. The Seleucid kings fought a series of wars against the Ptolemaic kings of Egypt for control of Judaea. Bactria and Parthia were lost c. 250 BCE. The Attalids declared independence in Pergamum. Briefly Antiochus III established control over the Eastern territories but then suffered a significant defeat to the Romans at Magnesia in 189 BCE which deprived the kingdom of territories west of the Taurus mountains.

TROOP NOTES

The core of the Seleucid army was the Iranian cavalry and the phalangites.

Elephants: Elephants were obtained from India and the Bactrian kings.

Cavalry: The cavalry were lancers. At the end of the 3rd century BCE cataphract armour was adopted by the bulk of the cavalry.

Phalanx: The phalanx was provided by settlers given land in return for military service. The largest settlements were in Syria. The performance of the Seleucid phalanx during this period was dismal. Based on historical results all guard agyraspists should arguably be downgraded Combat Shy, hence the option.

Cretan archers: The Seleucid armies regularly contained contingents of Cretan archers.

HISTORICAL NOTES

After the death of Antiochus IV, the kingdom suffered a series of civil wars. Media and Babylonia were lost to the Parthians in 129 BCE.

TROOP NOTES

Roman agyraspides: At his pageant at Daphne, Antiochus IV had 5,000 troops armed in the Roman fashion who might have been half of the agyraspides (as only 5,000 appeared in the parade and traditionally this corps was 10,000 strong).
Elephants: In 145 BCE African elephants were captured from Ptolemaic Egypt.
Cretan archers: Demetrius II ruled after 147 BCE backed by his Cretan mercenaries.

COMMAGENE

163 BCE TO 72 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Kingdom of Commagene was an Armenian kingdom located in and around the ancient city of Samosata, which served as its capital. In c. 163 BCE the local satrap, Ptolemaeus of Commagene, established himself as independent ruler following the death of the Seleucid king, Antiochus IV Epiphanes. The Kingdom of Commagene maintained its independence until 17 CE, when it was made a Roman province by Emperor Tiberius. It re-emerged as an independent kingdom when Antiochus IV of Commagene was reinstated to the throne by order of Caligula, then deprived of it by that same emperor, then restored to it a couple of years later by his successor, Claudius. The reemergent state lasted until 72 CE, when the Emperor Vespasian finally and definitively made it part of the Roman Empire.

TROOP NOTES

The Commagene army appears to have been a mix of Hellenistic and Armenian fighting traditions. The phalanx sent to aid Titus at the siege of Jerusalem is the last recorded use of a Hellenistic pike phalanx.

HISTORICAL ENEMIES

Parthian 2608; Armenian 2804.

LATE SELEUCID

128 TO 63 BCE

HISTORICAL NOTES

After the loss of Media and Babylon, the Seleucid kingdom collapsed into a series of civil wars over less and less territory. The populace became so desperate that in 93 BCE Tigranes was invited into Syria, the heart of the kingdom. Only a few cities remaining loyal to the Seleucid kings. The Romans annexed Syria as a province in Pompey's settlement of 63 BCE. The last king, Philip II, died sometime after 56 BCE.

TROOP NOTES

The Seleucid army of this period was reliant on its core Syrian territories and mercenaries from adjacent areas including Cilicia and Judaea. The regular civil wars appear to have provided plenty of opportunities for mercenaries. The defeats suffered by the Hellenistic armies against the Romans in the 2nd century BCE appear to have influenced fighting styles with increasing numbers of units following the Roman style of fighting.

PONTIC

HISTORICAL NOTES

Pontus consisted of parts of northern Turkey east of the Halys River. Ruled by the Persian Mithridatic dynasty from the latter part of the 4th century BCE, the kingdom progressively expanded. Under Mithridates VI control was extended over Galatia, Cappadocia and the Bosporean kingdom. In 89 BCE he defeated a Roman army and seized the Roman province of Asia, ordering the killing of 80,000 Romans and Italians. A Pontic army invaded Greece and was defeated by Sulla at the battle of Chaeronea. A second defeat was inflicted by the Romans at Orchomenus in 85 BCE. Mithridates agreed to a peace that included returning Asia to the Romans and giving back Bithynia and Cappadocia to their former kings. Further wars were fought with Rome. Between 74 BCE and 67 BCE Lucullus defeated Pontic and Armenian armies but had his command removed from him by Pompey. Pompey defeated Mithridates who fled to the Crimea. He was organising a new army when his son Pharnaces led a revolt against him, and he was forced to commit suicide or was assassinated. Pontus became a Roman province with Bithynia.

TROOP NOTES

Pontus had originally been part of Cappadocia and gradually increased its independence. It had a relatively small native force and relied extensively on mercenaries, either recruited from the Pontic steppes to the north or from the Roman provinces it overran. Mithridates also received a contingent of Armenians when fighting Lucullus.

Heavy cavalry: Recruited from the Pontic nobility.

Sarmatian cavalry: Recruited from the steppes.

Scythian cavalry: Recruited from the steppes.

Thracians: Continued to be available as mercenaries.

Galatians: Were employed as mercenaries.

Bastarnae: Recruited from the steppes.

Thureophoroi: Recruited as mercenaries from the Hellenistic influenced areas of Asia Minor.

Phalanx: A phalanx was recruited when Mithridates invaded and conquered the Roman provinces of Asia and Greece. It was supplemented by a phalanx of ex-slaves.

Imitation legionaries: After defeated in Greece, the army was reorganised and trained on Roman lines.

PALMYRAN

258 TO 273 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

Palmyra became a wealthy city from trade caravans. By the third century CE, Palmyra was a prosperous regional centre reaching the apex of its power in the 260s, when Palmyrene King Odaenathus defeated Persian Emperor Shapur I. The king was succeeded by regent Queen Zenobia, who rebelled against Rome and established the Palmyrene Empire which briefly encompassed the Roman provinces of Syria Palaestina, Arabia Petraea, Egypt, and large parts of Asia Minor. In 273 CE, Roman emperor Aurelian destroyed Palmyra.

TROOP NOTES

Palmyran troops had been integrated with the Roman army in 224 CE.
Cataphracts: The Palmyrene cataphracts gave the Romans a hard time.
Horse archers: Some horse archers were equipped with spears. This is like some Parthian horse archers who also used spears on occasion. It is not deemed sufficient to equip skirmishers with short spear.
Archers: Both regular and levied units of archers were employed.

HISTORICAL ENEMIES

Greuthingi or Early Ostrogothic 2118; Pre-Islamic Arab 2205; Imperial Roman 2517; Early Sassanid Persian 2613.

RULERS
