CREATING AN ARMY WITH THE MORTEM ET GLORIAM ARMY LISTS

Use the army lists to create your own customised armies using the Mortem et Gloriam Army Builder.

There are few general rules to follow:

1. An army must have at least 2 generals and can have no more than 4.
2. You must take at least the minimum of any troops noted and may not go beyond the maximum of any.
3. No army may have more than two generals who are Talented or better.
4. Unless specified otherwise, all elements in a UG must be classified identically. Unless specified otherwise, if an optional characteristic is taken, it must be taken by all the elements in the UG for which that optional characteristic is available.
5. Any UGs can be downgraded by one quality grade and/or by one shooting skill (Skilled to Experienced or Experienced to Unskilled) representing less strong, tired, or understrength troops. If any bases are downgraded all in the UG must be downgraded. So Average-Experienced skirmishers can always be downgraded to Poor-Unskilled.
6. Points are shown for troops with all mandatory characteristics applied. Points have been rounded to the nearest whole number. If quality or shooting skill is downgraded, then the points (including the points for any optional characteristics) will need to be adjusted.
7. An army entirely of Cavalry, Chariots, Camelry or Infantry with the Dismountable characteristic may choose the No Camp option.

Where allies are allowed, they must conform to the following rules:

1. An ally must be a minimum of 2 and a maximum of 4 UGs.
2. They must take enough UGs to get them to at least 50% of the minimums in the list being used.
3. They can thereafter take any troops up to the maximum to create the rest of the allied contingent.
4. Unless specified in the notes, the general must be the same type as the army commander in their own army's list but cannot be legendary.

Usually this results in 1-3 UGs being compulsory and you having full flexibility on the rest.

Where an internal ally is allowed, and no contingent is specified they must conform to the following rules:

1. Each internal ally must be a minimum of 2 and a maximum of 4 UGs.
2. The total number of troops taken of each type in the entire army must not exceed the maxima for that troop type.
3. They must take enough UGs to get them to at least 50% of the minimums in the list if there is enough allowance for a UG after the core army itself has taken the minimum. For example: An army has 4-12 cavalry (UG size 4,6) and 18-32 spearmen (UG size 6,8,9) as compulsory troops with 2 internal allies. The core army must take 4 cavalry and at least 18 spearmen. The first ally must take 4 cavalry and at least 9 spearmen. The second ally must take 4 cavalry but cannot take the 9 spearmen as this would exceed the 32 spearmen limit for the army.

4. If a list requires a proportion of a troop type to be upgraded or regraded, then the army as a whole must comply with this requirement. Internal allies do not have to comply these requirements. For example: $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{3}{4}$ of Turcomans must be upgraded from Experienced to Skilled shooting. An internal ally might have all Experienced as long as the army as a whole has $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{3}{4}$ Skilled.
5. They can thereafter take any troops up to the maximum to create the rest of the allied contingent.

Usually this results in 1-3 UGs being compulsory and you having full flexibility on the rest.

As a courtesy to your opponent when you deploy your troops, you should describe each UG fully; type, training, quality, protection, melee weaponry, shooting skill and weaponry and characteristics. You should also explain how any unusual troop types in your army function and any special rules including Stakes, Caltrops, Barricades and Obstacles and troop types such as Battle Wagons.

The easiest way to calculate points is to use the downloadable on-line army builder at www.mortem-et-gloriam.co.uk. Use this and all you do is use drop downs for the troop classifications and it does all the work for you. For those who prefer pen and paper, or who want to doodle some approximate designs before loading an army up, we have provided the points values with the lists. If a discrepancy exists in the points values between these lists and the army builder, then the army builder has the correct value.

FRIENDLY AND SCENARIO GAMES

Feel free to vary the troop classifications for friendly and scenario games. An interesting aspect of scenario games can be to see what the effect is from representing troops in a different manner.

HISTORICAL INTRODUCTION

In 577 CE the Northern Zhou conquered the Northern Qi and reunified northern China. The Southern Dynasties were gradually being conquered from the north. Yang Jian, of ethnic Han Chinese, usurped the throne and in 581 CE became Emperor Wen of Sui. This was a pivotal moment for China as he abolished the anti-Han policies of the Xianbei and initiated a series of reforms aimed at strengthening his Empire. Having secured China, Wen invaded Goguryeo, one of the Three Kingdoms of Korea, but was defeated. He was succeeded in 603 by his son Yang. Both Emperors Wen and Yang sent military expeditions into Vietnam and captured the north but were unable to defeat the Champa in the south. Yang launched further massive invasions of Goguryeo but the military expeditions were a failure. This weakened the Emperor and the economy, strained by large infrastructure projects, collapsed.

Li Yuan was Duke of Tang and governor of Taiyuan during the Sui dynasty's collapse. Li Yuan rose in rebellion in 617 CE. Li Yuan occupied the capital Chang'an and relegated Emperor Yang to the position of retired Emperor. When Yang was murdered in June 618 CE, Li Yuan declared himself Emperor Gaozu of Tang. He ruled until 626 CE when he was deposed by his son who became Emperor Taizong.

Externally, the nomadic Turkic (Tujue) Khaganate in the north had posed a major threat. Around the time the Sui dynasty was established it collapsed in a series of civil wars and split into Eastern and Western Khaganates. Although a vassal of the Sui, the Eastern Khaganate became a threat to the Tang and in 629 CE the Tang launched a major offensive. With the help of the Xueyantuo the Eastern Khaganate were defeated. The Turks were settled within the Tang northern provinces. These Turks were often requisitioned into Tang armies. The Xueyantuo occupied the territory of the Eastern Khaganate but in 646 the Xueyantuo were defeated by a Tang Uyghur alliance and fled west.

During the 44-year reign of Emperor Xuanzong (713 to 756 CE), the Tang dynasty reached its height, a golden age with low economic inflation and a toned down lifestyle for the imperial court. In 755 CE a half-Sogdian, half-Turk commander, An Lushan, led a rebellion. The capital was captured and only retaken with the help of the Uyghur Khaganate. The Tibetans took advantage to raid many areas under Chinese control. During the first half of the 8th century, regional military governors, the jiedushi, had increased in power. After the rebellion, central control was never fully established. Between the years 806 and 819 CE, Emperor Xianzong conducted seven major military campaigns to quell the rebellious provinces that had claimed autonomy from central authority, managing to subdue all but two of them. In 858 CE, enormous floods inundated vast tracts of the North China Plain. This further weakened Tang control and a rebellion in 874 CE seized the capital and took 10 years to defeat. In 907 CE the Tang dynasty was ended when Zhu Wen, a military governor, deposed Emperor Ai and took the throne for himself.

By this time the China had broken down into a series of separate kingdoms, known as the Five Dynasties in the north and the Ten Kingdoms in the south. Three of the dynasties (and one of the Ten Kingdoms) were founded by Shatuo. The Shatuo were Turks originally subject to the Tang who had provided significant aid during the An Lushan rebellion. They then allied themselves with the Tibetans against the Tang but fell out with the Tibetans and were settled in Tang territory.

China would be reunited by Emperor Taizu who created the Song dynasty. He started in the army of the Later Han dynasty and when Guo Wei overthrew that dynasty and created the Later Zhou dynasty in 951 CE he was promoted to palace guard commander. In 960 CE he staged his own coup. Only the Northern Han, supported by the Khitan-Liao held out, but they were defeated by 979 CE.

CHINESE NAMES AND TERMS

There are currently two systems for the transliteration of Chinese into English, the Wade-Giles system and the Pinyin system. Pinyin is the newer system and has been adopted in these army lists. Many works however use Wade-Giles and the following table lists the transliteration of names and terms used in these lists.

Pinyin	Wade-Giles	Pinyin	Wade-Giles
Balhae	Po-hai	Qiang	Ch'inag
Bubing	Pu-ping	Qin	Ch'in
Bushe	Pu-she	Tūjué	T'u-chüeh
Jin	Chin/Ts'in	Xianbei	Hsien-pei

MAXIMUS ARMY LISTS

CALCULATING POINTS

Army points are calculated as follows:

GENERALS - MAXIMUS

Type of general	Army Commander		Sub-general		Ally general
	Professional	Instinctive	Professional	Instinctive	Professional	Instinctive
Legendary	1600	1400	n/a	n/a	800	700
Talented	1100	900	850	700	650	600
Competent	700	550	600	450	300	250
Mediocre	250	0	400	250	100	50

CAMPS

Type of camp	Poor	Average	Superior
Unfortified	108	180	252
Fortified	216	360	504
Flexible	180	300	420
Mobile	126	210	294
No camp	378	N/A	N/A

A flexible camp is deployed as a fortified camp when defending and a mobile camp when invading.
No camp deploys a poor mobile camp when defending and no camp at all when invading.

UGs

For each UG multiply the cost shown in the list (adjusting for any optional characteristics) by the number of bases.

NOTES

1. Points values for skirmishers in Magna and Pacto are greater than in Maximus as SuGs shoot at full effect with only two ranks.
2. For further details on how points are calculated visit the Mortem et Gloriam website.

PRE DYNASTIC KHITAN

432 TO 1000 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Khitan were a nomadic tribe who occupied parts of modern Mongolia, Northeast China, and the Russian far east. They originated from the Xianbei. They separated from the Kumo Xi in around 388 CE, when the Kumo Xi-Khitan tribal grouping was defeated by the newly established Northern Wei. In 630 they submitted to emperor Taizong of the Tang. From the 5th to the 8th centuries, they were dominated by the Chinese to their south and the Turks and Uyghurs to the west. They slowly grew their power and independence. Khitan warriors were used by neighbouring powers but were prepared to attack them if they looked as if they would become a threat. In the 696 to 697 CE Li-Shun Rebellion the Khitan were encouraged by the Turks to revolt against the Tang. After successfully rebelling, the Turks attacked, to the advantage of the newly reborn second Turkic empire. With the collapse of the Uyghur Khaganate and the Tang dynasty, in 907 CE the Khitan leader Yelu Abaoji founded the Liao dynasty. He reorganised the Khitan into a more formal structure borrowing ideas from the Chinese state. This included centralising the monarchy. He also founded several cities which were partly populated with captured Chinese. This list represents the Khitan until 927. It can also represent Xi tribes until absorbed by the Khitan-Liao around 1000.

TROOP NOTES

The bow was the primary weapon.

The Khitan leader Yelu Abaoji made the army more professional, the first Khitan ordo numbering 6,000. Most of the army remained tribal. The ordo were greatly expanded in later reigns.

SOGDIAN

500 TO 730 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

Sogdiana lay between the Oxus and the Jaxartes. It had been ruled by the Achaemenid Persians, Alexander the Great, the Graeco-Bactrians and the Kushans. As the Kushan kingdom collapsed the area achieved independence. The Sogdian states centred on the city of Samarkand sat astride the Silk Road. They rose to prominence in the Tang dynasty and traded as far as Byzantium. When the Arabs defeated the Sassanids, some Persians fled to Sogdia. Qutayba ibn Muslim, Governor of Greater Khorasan under the Umayyad Caliphate, initiated the Muslim conquest of Sogdia during the early 8th century, with the local ruler of Balkh offering him aid as an Umayyad ally. In around 717 CE the Sogdians revolted. With the aid of Turkic peoples, the Sogdians were able to expel the Umayyad Arab garrison from Samarkand and Umayyad attempts to restore power there were repelled. On the arrival of Sa'id ibn Amr al-Harashi some Sogdians declared allegiance to the Umayyad governor whilst others fled.

TROOP NOTES

Sogdian chakars were the retainers of the rulers and nobles, with a strong heroic ethos. They carried lance, bow and sometimes a round shield. They charged with the lance. Bows are mostly shown being used for duels on foot.

TARIM BASIN STATES

500 TO 1063 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

This list covers the states of the Tarim basin included Turfan, Kucha and Khotan.

Turfan was on the border between the nomadic peoples of the north and the settled oasis dwellers of Xinjiang. In 450 CE it became the new state of Gaochang. In 640 expeditions sent by the Tang dynasty destroyed Gaochang's power, although smaller polities existed there for several centuries after the Tang withdrew. Khotan, the last independent city, fell to the Qarakhanids.

Kuche was located on the branch of the Silk Road that ran along the northern edge of the Taklamakan Desert in the Tarim Basin. It was conquered by the Tang in 640. During periods of Tibetan domination, it maintained some independence, but was captured by the Uyghur Khaganate. It became an important Uyghur Successor State which is included in a separate list.

The Kingdom of Khotan was an ancient Iranic Saka Buddhist kingdom located on the branch of the Silk Road that ran along the southern edge of the Taklamakan Desert in the Tarim Basin, probably founded by Indo-Scythians. The capital was to the west of modern-day Hotan. In 640 it submitted to the Tang emperor. The Tibetans seized Khotan in 665. Tang China regained control in 692 but Khotan re-asserted its independence after the An Lushan rebellion in 755. Khotan was again conquered by the Tibetan Empire in 792 and gained its independence in 851. In the 10th century Khotan was the only Tarim Basin state that was not conquered by the Uyghurs. Khotan became engaged in a struggle with the Qarakhanids and was conquered some time before 1063.

TROOP NOTES

Tarim Basin cavalry were equipped with lance and bow but may have placed greater emphasis on the bow.

GOKTURK

550 to 774 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Gokturks were a nomadic confederation of Turkic peoples in medieval Inner Asia. Göktürks were called Tūjué by the Chinese. Under the leadership of Bumin Qaghan (d. 552) and his sons, the Ashina succeeded the Rouran Khaganate as the main power in the Mongolian Plateau and established a stronger empire, which rapidly expanded to rule huge territories in Central Asia. This khaganate exercised considerable control over the lucrative Silk Road trade for significant periods.

The origins of the first Türk Khanate trace back to 546 CE, when Bumin Qaghan made a pre-emptive strike against the Uyghur and Tiele groups planning a revolt against their overlords, the Rouran Khanate. Having excelled both in battle and diplomacy, Bumin declared himself Illig Khagan of the new khanate at Otukan but died a year later. His son, Muqan Qaghan, defeated the Hephthalite Empire, Khitan and Kyrgyz. The appearance of the Avars in the West been interpreted as a nomadic faction fleeing the westward expansion of the Gokturks. The first dynasty collapsed in 581, initiating a series of political conflicts and civil wars which fragmented the khanate in Eastern and Western actions.

The Turkic Khanate split in two after the death of the fourth ruler, Taspar Qaghan, around 584 thus entering a period of civil war. A century later, a second, renewed, Turkic Khaganate emerged in 682. They revolted against the Tang Dynasty Chinese domination and, over the following decades, steadily gained control of the steppes. By 705, they had expanded as far south as Samarkand and threatened Arab control of Transoxiana. The Gokturks clashed with the Umayyad Caliphate in a series of battles (712 to 713) but the Arabs emerged as victors. The second Khaganate lasted until 744, when it was overthrown by the Uyghurs, themselves a Turkic group.

TROOP NOTES

Contemporary depictions show lamellar-armoured cavalry with bow, sword, slung shield, and some show lance and/or horse barding in addition. It is now concluded that only the richest would have a substantial proportion of armoured horses and that it is even debateable whether armoured cavalry formed in solid bodies. They are not known to have used "shower-shooting".

HISTORICAL NOTES

Founded by Emperor Wen of Sui, the Sui dynasty was a short-lived imperial dynasty of China of pivotal significance. The Sui unified the Northern and Southern dynasties and reinstalled the rule of ethnic Han Chinese in the entirety of China proper, along with Sinicization of former nomadic ethnic minorities (the Five Barbarians) within its territory. It was succeeded by the Tang dynasty, which largely inherited its foundation.

A series of costly and disastrous military campaigns against Goguryeo, one of the Three Kingdoms of Korea, ended in defeat by 614 CE. As a result, the dynasty disintegrated under a series of popular revolts culminating in the assassination of Emperor Yang by his ministers in 618.

This list also includes armies that fought the Tang as they asserted their control across China.

TROOP NOTES

Infantry were divided into Bubing "marching infantry" and Bushe "foot archers". Mo-ho were the Manchurian tribes called Malgal by the Koreans.

TANG CHINA - NORTHERN

618 TO 763 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

A high-ranking Sui general, Li Yuan, seized on the Sui disasters and rose against the emperor. He went on to establish his own Tang dynasty. After capturing the capital, proclaiming the formation of his new dynasty, and styling himself as Emperor Gaozu of the Tang, Li Yuan divided this force into twelve divisions, each led by a trusted general, for there was still much fighting to come before China was securely in Tang hands.

Tang Taizong, second emperor and co-founder with his father of the Tang dynasty, demonstrated a combination of military and political skill that made him one of China's great emperors. His mastery of the nomadic threat is especially notable. Taizong was accepted by the steppe soldiers he led due to his frequent and casual adaptation to steppe traditions, especially his knowledge of steppe politics and military tactics. Frequently, he led his soldiers in person, often when outnumbered by enemy forces, reportedly having four horses shot out from under him during his campaigns. He was also acquainted with the steppe military tactic of the feigned retreat, adapting this tactic successfully from its use with cavalry forces to use with primarily infantry forces.

In policy, Taizong was particularly successful at implementing his father's expansionist strategy of landgrab and settlement. After the reunification of China, he was not only able to legitimize himself as the Chinese Emperor~ the "Son of Heaven," but after he destroyed the massive Gokturk Empire he was also able to proclaim himself as the "Heavenly Khaghan" (essentially, "Emperor") as a simultaneous ruler of all Turks.

TROOP NOTES

The Tang army was divided into twelve divisions expected to be able to operate on their own with a full complement of various types of weapons and soldiers, both infantry and cavalry. In addition, the soldiers were allotted lands on which their families were to be settled. The frontier colonization of these conquered lands was to make the divisions self-sufficient in supplies, an institutional continuation of the Northern Wei and Sui military systems. This was why Li Yuan took such care to settle large numbers of his soldiers on lands near to the steppes, both as a secure line of settlement but also as a projection point to launch further expansions. Unlike the southerners, the Li clan, having been true northerners who intermarried and knew well of steppe customs- many of the early Tang Emperors were very comfortable with steppe traditions —a result of the intermingling of Chinese and nomadic peoples during the previous 300 years of disunion. From very early in campaigns the Tang acquired contingents of Turkish cavalry and increasingly added these types of troops to boost their cavalry arm (and at times had as many as 10 senior Turkish generals). In many campaigns these Turkish contingents outnumbered the Fubing. The army started to emphasise Turkish techniques of horse archery. Some cavalry is depicted as unarmoured, but most appear to have worn armour and helmets. Some may have ridden armoured horses. Tang cavalry carried lances as well as bows. The crossbow, once regarded as the most effective weapon of the Han infantry, seems never to have been popular with Tang armies. The Fubing system was a militia system where men between 20 and 60 years of age were required to provide their own sword, bow and arrows and serve on border protection duty for 3 years.

Imperial guard troops deteriorated in quality over time and became relegated to ceremonial duties only. Any remaining imperial guard at the time of the An Lushan rebellion appear to have deserted.

TIBETAN EMPIRE

618 TO 840 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

In the late seventh century a Tibetan-speaking government wrested control of the entirety of the Tibetan Plateau. They expanded into Xinjiang, Gansu, and Shanxi, even briefly capturing the capital of Tang China at Chang'an (modern Xi'an) in 763 CE. Tibetan armies campaigned in Ladakh, in present-day Jammu and Kashmir, and in Bihar, present day India, even going so far as to rescue a Tang diplomatic mission lost near Tirabhukti (now named Tirhut) in 648. The Kathmandu valley, which had been under the control of the Licchavi from the early first millennium CE, also fell to Tibet's rulers. For a time, Tibet struggled against both China and the Arabs for control of the trade routes to the north of the Plateau, the 'Silk Road', a contest ultimately decided in the mid-eighth century in favour of the Arabs at the battle of Talas (or Taraz).

TROOP NOTES

The core of Tibetan armies were cataphracts, accompanied by horse archers. The cataphracts carried bows but favoured the spear. A Tang source records them dismounting. Exorcists had magic daggers. The Abbasid infantry were either captured or exiles who fought under Tibetan command.

Note: Tibetan garrison spearmen may be given the fanatic characteristic (40 points) and one element must be upgraded to the fanatic exorcist. This element is automatically moved to a front rank in combat to replace an existing base. When the UG is not in combat the element may be automatically replaced by a rear rank base. The unit does not require a general to accompany the unit. The fanatic characteristic is lost if the element is killed.

CHANGES FROM LAST VERSION

Renamed from Early Tibetan. Adjusted start date. Added Uyghur and Shatuo allies.

TANG CHINA - CENTRAL

623 TO 763 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

The An Lushan Rebellion was a devastating rebellion against the Tang dynasty of China. The rebellion overtly began on 16 December 755 CE, when general An Lushan declared himself emperor in Northern China, thus establishing a rival Yan Dynasty, and ended when Yan fell on 17 February 763. The rebellion spanned the reigns of three Tang emperors before it was finally quashed. It involved a wide range of regional powers including Arab, Uyghur and Sogdian forces. The rebellion and subsequent disorder resulted in a huge loss of life and large-scale destruction. It significantly weakened the Tang dynasty and led to the loss of the Western Regions.

TROOP NOTES

Central armies would have lacked the Turkish cavalry available to northern armies.

TANG CHINA - SOUTHERN

623 TO 763 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

The south of China was relatively quiet under the Tang dynasty compared to the north. In 737 CE the Tang helped the Nanzhao rebel from Tibetan control. In 751 the Tang governor of Jiannan attacked Nanzhao but was heavily defeated and a further army in 754 achieved little. The Nanzhao established an alliance with the Tibetans that would last until 794.

TROOP NOTES

The auxiliary troops used in the south were different from the troops used in the north consisting mostly of highland tribesmen.

BALHAE KOREAN

698 TO 926 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

Balhae was the successor state to Goguryeo, which had occupied most of northern Korea and Manchuria before being conquered in 668 CE by the kingdom of Silla, with the aid of the Chinese Tang dynasty. The Tang administration took power in the region after the fall of Goguryeo. Tae Cho-Yŏng led a rebellion against it with a group made up of members of Goguryeo's former ruling class and people from the northern Malgal tribe. He established the new state of Chin, later called Balhae, in the Sungari (Songhua) River valley in what is now China's Jilin province and became its king.

By 705 China and Balhae had established friendly relations, and by 712 the Tang had formally recognized Tae Cho-Yŏng as Balhae's king. Balhae's government administration was modelled after the Tang bureaucracy, and the two states were close allies. Balhae's ruling class consisted largely of the former aristocrats of Goguryeo. Culturally, the kingdom bore a strong resemblance to Goguryeo. Surviving Buddhist images and stone lanterns suggest that Buddhism played a predominant role in the life of the Balhae people.

The state of Balhae grew powerful and wealthy. It was a hostile rival to Silla, the most significant power on the Korean peninsula, and Silla built a defensive wall along its northern border. Like Silla, Balhae was among the states that offered tribute to the Tang. Its trade and cultural relations were largely with the nomadic tribes of the north and with Japan and China. Its territory eventually extended southward from the Sungari and Amur rivers in northern Manchuria to the northern half of Korea.

TROOP NOTES

Balhae armies were influenced by the Manchurian tribesmen as well as Korean tactics.

TÜRĞESH

699 TO 1175 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Türgesh or Turgish emerged as an independent power after the demise of the Western Turkic Khaganate and established a khaganate in 699 CE. The Turgesh Khaganate lasted until 766 when the Karluks defeated them. During this time, they defeated both Tang and Umayyad forces. They allied with the Tibetans to attack Kucha in the Tarim Basin and aided the Sogdians to rebel against the Umayyads. After Suluk was defeated in 737 by the Umayyads a civil war started. The victor, Kul-chor submitted to and then rebelled against the Tang. The last Turgesh ruler declared himself a vassal of the Uyghurs but was defeated in 766 by the Karluks - a group of Göktürks. This list also includes later Turkish nomads such as the Oghuz and the Tashkent and Ferghana Turks.

TROOP NOTES

Turkish armies used classic nomadic horse archer tactics.

UYGHUR KHAGANATE

744 TO 860 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Uyghurs were part of a Turkic confederation called the Tiele who lived in the valleys south of Lake Baikal and around the Yenisei River. They overthrew the Second Turkic Khaganate (Gokturks) and established the Uyghur Khaganate. The Uyghur Khaganate stretched from the Caspian Sea to Manchuria. It was administered from the imperial capital Ordu-Baliq, one of the biggest ancient cities built in Mongolia. In 840 CE, following a famine and civil war, the Uyghur Khaganate was overrun by the Yenisei Kirghiz, another Turkic people. As a result, most tribal groups formerly under Uyghur control dispersed and moved out of Mongolia.

TROOP NOTES

Uyghur armies were like Turkish armies of the period.

LATE TANG CHINA - NORTHERN

764 TO 884 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

Following the An Lushan rebellion the northern provinces were highly militarised and effectively independent of the central government in Chang'an. These provinces were controlled by jiedushi, military governors. Many became hereditary, using the title of "king". Unsuccessful governors suffered mutinies. At this point the central government might try to intervene, but usually all that was achieved was to obtain a greater share of tax revenue from the successful successor.

TROOP NOTES

The core of the army was based in and around the provincial capital, supplemented by regional troops. They could be further supplemented by part-time militia troops who received training during the winter when they were not farming their lands.

LATE TANG CHINA - CENTRAL

764 TO 884 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

Following the An Lushan rebellion the central government lost much of the control it had over the militarised northern provinces. The last great ambitious ruler of the Tang dynasty was Emperor Xianzong who reigned from 805 to 820 CE. He had an effective well trained imperial army stationed at the capital led by his court eunuchs; this was the Army of Divine Strategy, numbering 240,000 in strength as recorded in 798. Under his reign there was a brief end to the hereditary jiedushi, as Xianzong appointed his own military officers and staffed the regional bureaucracies once again with civil officials. However, Xianzong's successors proved less capable. In 848 the Chinese general Zhang Yichao managed to wrestle control of some western regions from the Tibetan Empire. A rebellion in 874 took 10 years to quash and many of the jiedushi were autonomous. Large groups of bandits ravaged the countryside during the last years of the Tang. The last Emperor was deposed in 907.

TROOP NOTES

The central army was drawn from other parts of China and suffered from divided command structures. Shortages of cavalry were sometimes supplemented by Shatuo and Uyghur allies. Armies could be large but do not appear to have been as effective as northern armies.

LATE TANG CHINA - SOUTHERN

764 TO 884 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

This list covers Tang forces in the south following the An Lushan rebellion. The districts of Lingnan and Annam (which has its own list) remained relatively peaceful for most of this period.

TROOP NOTES

The armies in the south formed a minor part of the late Tang military and were not involved in much fighting. It is likely that they were less efficient than their northern counterparts.

HISTORICAL ENEMIES

EARLY SHATUO

808 TO 907 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Shatuo (also Shato) were a Turkic tribe that heavily influenced Chinese politics from the late 9th through the 10th century. They founded three of the five dynasties and one of the ten kingdoms. The Shatuo were descended from tribes in the Western Turkic Khaganate. They allied themselves to the Chinese and in return were relocated into China where they helped to suppress the uprising of Huang-Cha between 875 and 883 CE. The Shatuo leader was appointed governor of Hedong.

TROOP NOTES

Chinese troops became available once the Shatuo ruled Hedong but were not integrated with Shatuo troops at this time.

HISTORICAL ENEMIES

UYGHUR SUCCESSOR STATES

860 TO 1330 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Ganzhou Uyghur Kingdom was established sometime after the Tibetan Empire was driven out of Hexi Corridor by Zhang Yichao in 848 CE. The Hexi Corridor, located within modern Gansu, was traditionally a Chinese inroad into Asia. From the 9th to 11th centuries this area was contested between the Ganzhou Uyghurs and the Guiyi Circuit, a regime nominally vassals of the Tang and Song dynasties. It survived until 1036 when it was annexed by the Western Xia.

The Kingdom of Qocho was a Tocharian-Uyghur state created in 843 by Uyghurs fleeing from the destruction of the Uyghur Khaganate. They settled in Qocho, near modern Turpan. A mainly Christian and Buddhist nation, they faced a jihad from the Qarakhanids after the Kingdom of Khotan had been conquered in 1006. Independence was maintained until they became a vassal of the Qara Khitai. In 1209 they allied themselves to the Mongols under Genghis Khan and existed as a vassal state until 1330. Allied to the Yuan, they were conquered by the Chagatai Khanate and converted to Islam.

TROOP NOTES

The Uyghur successor states combined Turkish cavalry with infantry consisting of spearmen and archers.

TEN KINGDOMS CHINA

885 TO 975 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Five Dynasties and Ten Kingdoms Period the era started with the fall of the Tang dynasty in 907 CE and ended with the founding of the Song dynasty in 960. Many states had been de facto independent kingdoms long before 907. Unlike the dynasties of northern China, which succeeded one other in rapid succession, the regimes of South China were generally concurrent, each controlling a specific geographical area. Nine of the Ten Kingdoms: Wu (907 to 937); Wuyue (907 to 978); Min (909 to 945); Chu (907 to 951); Southern Han (917 to 971); Former Shu (907 to 925); Later Shu (934 to 965); Jingnan (924 to 963); Southern Tang (937 to 975) are covered by this list. The Northern Han based in Hedong are covered by the Five Dynasties list.

TROOP NOTES

As Tang Central authority collapsed, warlords controlled regional troops.
The Southern Han are recorded as using war elephants.
Swordsmen are recorded as leading the army into battle, possibly with the task of disrupting the enemy battle line.

FIVE DYNASTIES CHINA

885 TO 979 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

Following the suppression of the Huang Chao rebellion in 884 CE, the Tang court effectively lost any control over the military. Armies were now under the control of regional governors. Zhu Wen gained control over most of northern China, killed the last Tang emperor and established the Later Liang dynasty in 907. The Shatuo in Hedong overthrew this state in 923. They in turn were overthrown by the Later Jin dynasty in 936, ceding the "16 provinces" around Beijing in return for Liao assistance. This was to have long-term consequences. Despite Liao assistance, the Later Jin were overthrown in 947 by the Later Han who were replaced by the Later Zhou in 951. A remnant of the Later Han survived in Hedong until overthrown by the Song in 979.

This list covers the armies in northern China from 885 until 979 except for the Shatuo prior to 923, the Later Zhou and the Song, all of whom have their own lists. It includes the Zhao state from 910 to 921.

TROOP NOTES

Five Dynasties armies developed from later Tang military practice. Infantry could vary in quality. All cavalry seems to have been equipped with bows following Shatuo influence.

LATER SHATUO

908 TO 923 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Shatuo were established in Hedong province. Shatuo nobles established the Later Tang dynasty of China in 923. After the conquest of the Later Liang in 923 CE the army retained little that was Shatuo in character and is covered by the Five Dynasties Chinese list.

TROOP NOTES

Shatuo armies may have had a greater proportion of cavalry than other Five Dynasties armies but otherwise appear to have been similar.

HISTORICAL ENEMIES

Pre Dynastic Khitan 4401; Ten Kingdoms China 4420; Five Dynasties China 4421.

RULER

Li Cunxu ruled the Shatuo Former Jin state from 908 to 923 before proclaiming himself emperor of the Later Tang.
