CREATING AN ARMY WITH THE MORTEM ET GLORIAM ARMY LISTS

Use the army lists to create your own customised armies using the Mortem et Gloriam Army Builder.

There are few general rules to follow:

1. An army must have at least 2 generals and can have no more than 4.
2. You must take at least the minimum of any troops noted and may not go beyond the maximum of any.
3. No army may have more than two generals who are Talented or better.
4. Unless specified otherwise, all elements in a UG must be classified identically. Unless specified otherwise, if an optional characteristic is taken, it must be taken by all the elements in the UG for which that optional characteristic is available.
5. Any UGs can be downgraded by one quality grade and/or by one shooting skill (Skilled to Experienced or Experienced to Unskilled) representing less strong, tired, or understrength troops. If any bases are downgraded all in the UG must be downgraded. So Average-Experienced skirmishers can always be downgraded to Poor-Unskilled.
6. Points are shown for troops with all mandatory characteristics applied. Points have been rounded to the nearest whole number. If quality or shooting skill is downgraded, then the points (including the points for any optional characteristics) will need to be adjusted.
7. An army entirely of Cavalry, Chariots, Camelry or Infantry with the Dismountable characteristic may choose the No Camp option.

Where allies are allowed, they must conform to the following rules:

1. An ally must be a minimum of 2 and a maximum of 4 UGs.
2. They must take enough UGs to get them to at least 50% of the minimums in the list being used.
3. They can thereafter take any troops up to the maximum to create the rest of the allied contingent.
4. Unless specified in the notes, the general must be the same type as the army commander in their own army's list but cannot be legendary.

Usually this results in 1-3 UGs being compulsory and you having full flexibility on the rest.

Where an internal ally is allowed, and no contingent is specified they must conform to the following rules:

1. Each internal ally must be a minimum of 2 and a maximum of 4 UGs.
2. The total number of troops taken of each type in the entire army must not exceed the maxima for that troop type.
3. They must take enough UGs to get them to at least 50% of the minimums in the list if there is enough allowance for a UG after the core army itself has taken the minimum. For example: An army has 4-12 cavalry (UG size 4,6) and 18-32 spearmen (UG size 6,8,9) as compulsory troops with 2 internal allies. The core army must take 4 cavalry and at least 18 spearmen. The first ally must take 4 cavalry and at least 9 spearmen. The second ally must take 4 cavalry but cannot take the 9 spearmen as this would exceed the 32 spearmen limit for the army.

4. If a list requires a proportion of a troop type to be upgraded or regraded, then the army as a whole must comply with this requirement. Internal allies do not have to comply these requirements. For example: $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{3}{4}$ of Turcomans must be upgraded from Experienced to Skilled shooting. An internal ally might have all Experienced as long as the army as a whole has $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{3}{4}$ Skilled.
5. They can thereafter take any troops up to the maximum to create the rest of the allied contingent.

Usually this results in 1-3 UGs being compulsory and you having full flexibility on the rest.

As a courtesy to your opponent when you deploy your troops, you should describe each UG fully; type, training, quality, protection, melee weaponry, shooting skill and weaponry and characteristics. You should also explain how any unusual troop types in your army function and any special rules including Stakes, Caltrops, Barricades and Obstacles and troop types such as Battle Wagons.

The easiest way to calculate points is to use the downloadable on-line army builder at www.mortem-et-gloriam.co.uk. Use this and all you do is use drop downs for the troop classifications and it does all the work for you. For those who prefer pen and paper, or who want to doodle some approximate designs before loading an army up, we have provided the points values with the lists. If a discrepancy exists in the points values between these lists and the army builder, then the army builder has the correct value.

FRIENDLY AND SCENARIO GAMES

Feel free to vary the troop classifications for friendly and scenario games. An interesting aspect of scenario games can be to see what the effect is from representing troops in a different manner.

HISTORICAL INTRODUCTION

A feature of medieval Spain was the Reconquista, the Crusade by which territories were recaptured and Christianised.

In the 10th century CE, Al-Andalus was the major power in Spain. Christian kingdoms of Asturia, Galicia, Castille, Navarre and Aragon existed in the north and east. A slow but steady migration of Christian subjects to the northern kingdoms of Christian Spain increased their power. The Caliphate of Cordoba established in 929 effectively broke all ties with the Egyptian and Syrian caliphs. The Caliphate collapsed into civil war and split into “taifa” kingdoms. As many as 33 taifas obtained independence over the next century. This encouraged the Christians of the north to take over the Muslim territories. Due to their military weakness, taifa rulers on two occasions invited North African warriors. The Almoravids were invited after the fall of Toledo in 1085 and the Almohads after the fall of Lisbon in 1147. On both occasions, they were more interested in annexing the territories of the taifas to their own North African empires than in fighting the Christian states.

The Christian kingdoms that were initially fragmented consolidated over time. The Kingdom of Asturia transitioned into the Kingdom of León in 924. Galicia remained semi-independent from Leon until the 12th century. Castile broke away from León in 931, but returned to the nominal control of León in 1035 under Ferdinand I. On his death the kingdoms were split amongst his sons but were reunited by Alfonso VI (with the help of El Cid) in 1072. The kingdoms were again separated on the death of Alfonso VII until re-united in 1230 under Ferdinand III.

The Kingdom of Navarre took form around the city of Pamplona. Briefly independent in the 10th century, it freed itself from vassalage to the Caliphate of Cordoba in the early 11th century. A series of partitions and dynastic changes led to periods of rule by the kings of Aragon (1054 to 1134) and France (1285 to 1328). The southern part of Navarre was conquered by the Spanish in 1512. The northern part was merged into France.

The Crown of Aragon originated in 1137, when the Kingdom of Aragon and the County of Barcelona merged by dynastic union. Aragon was in competition with Castile for control of the middle valley of the Ebro, Barcelona was linked to southern France, known as Occitania. In 1213, Aragon allied to the southern French were defeated by Simon de Montfort and his northern French army at the Battle of Muret. Peter II of Aragon was killed in this battle, and it led to the Treaty of Meaux-Paris in which the Crown of Aragon renounced its rights to Occitania allowing these territories to be incorporated into France.

Aragon returned to an era of expanding southwards. Majorca and much of Valencia was conquered. Murcia was captured in 1266 and then handed over to Castile. When James II of Aragon completed the conquest of Valencia, Aragon was established as one of the major powers in Europe. Sicily, and Neopatria and Athens in Greece, came under Aragonese rule. In 1469 Ferdinand II of Aragon married Infanta Isabella of Castile, half-sister to King Henry IV of Castile. On his death in 1474, the territories were in a dynastic union.

Portugal arose in the 10th century as a duchy of the Kingdom of Asturias. In 1139 Alfonso Henriques declared himself as King of Portugal. He was officially recognised by the Pope in 1179 as Alfonso I. The Algarve was conquered from the Moors in 1249, and in 1255 Lisbon became the capital. The conquest drew the anger of Alfonso X of Castile and war, but in 1263 he renounced his claim to suzerainty over the Algarve. The border with Spain has remained almost unchanged since. The Treaty of Windsor (1386) created an alliance between Portugal and England. In 1415 a Portuguese fleet, commanded by the king and the three princes, set sail for and captured Ceuta in Africa. This was the first step in creating the Portuguese Empire.

By 1250 the Emirate of Granada was the last part of the Iberian Peninsula to be held by the Muslims. It was a tributary state of Castile. Granada's peace with Castile broke down on various occasions. Granada lost territory to Castile at the Battle of Teba in 1330. In 1340, Granada under Yusuf I supported the failed Marinid invasion of the Iberian Peninsula, which ended at the Battle of Río Salado. The Emirate's attack on the Castilian frontier town of Zahara in December 1481 led to ten years of war. By 1491, the city of Granada itself lay under siege. A treaty was signed setting out the conditions for surrender. On January 2, 1492, Muhammad XII gave up complete control of Granada to Ferdinand and Isabella.

MAXIMUS ARMY LISTS

CALCULATING POINTS

Army points are calculated as follows:

GENERALS - MAXIMUS

Type of general	Army Commander		Sub-general		Ally general
	Professional	Instinctive	Professional	Instinctive	Professional	Instinctive
Legendary	1600	1400	n/a	n/a	800	700
Talented	1100	900	850	700	650	600
Competent	700	550	600	450	300	250
Mediocre	250	0	400	250	100	50

CAMPS

Type of camp	Poor	Average	Superior
Unfortified	108	180	252
Fortified	216	360	504
Flexible	180	300	420
Mobile	126	210	294
No camp	378	N/A	N/A

A flexible camp is deployed as a fortified camp when defending and a mobile camp when invading.
No camp deploys a poor mobile camp when defending and no camp at all when invading.

UGs

For each UG multiply the cost shown in the list (adjusting for any optional characteristics) by the number of bases.

NOTES

1. Points values for skirmishers in Magna and Pacto are greater than in Maximus as SuGs shoot at full effect with only two ranks.
2. For further details on how points are calculated visit the Mortem et Gloriam website.

EARLY CATALAN AND ARAGON

988 TO 1149 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

Aragon was originally a Carolingian feudal county around the city of Jaca which in the 9th century CE became a vassal of the kingdom of Pamplona (later Navarre). On the death of Sancho III of Navarre in 1035, the kingdom was divided. Ramiro, Sancho's illegitimate son became ruler of Aragon. His son, Sancho Ramirez inherited both Navarre and Aragon. As the Aragonese expanded south at the expense of Al Andalus, the capital moved to first Huesca in 1096 and Zaragoza in 1118. In 1135 different rulers were chosen for Navarre and Aragon.

TROOP NOTES

Catalonian armies developed along similar lines as French armies of this period.

TAIFA ANDALUSIAN

1017 TO 1110 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

The rise of the Taifas was due to the decline of the Caliphate of Cordoba. After the fall of the Caliphate of Cordoba in 1031, about 33 taifas were independent after the civil war and conflict in Al-Andalus. The strongest and largest taifa in this first period (11th century) were the Taifa of Zaragoza, Taifa of Toledo, Taifa of Badajoz, and the Taifa of Seville. In 1086 Yusuf ibn Tashfin, the Almoravid ruler of North Africa, was invited by the Muslim taifa princes of Al-Andalus in the Iberian Peninsula to defend their territories from the encroachment of Alfonso VI, King of León and Castile. He landed in Spain and defeated Castile at the Battle of Sagrajas. By 1094, Yusuf had annexed most of the major taifas, except for Saragossa which remained independent until 1110.

TROOP NOTES

Taifa armies continued to adopt the military organisation developed under the Umayyad Caliphate. Christian troops were used from the middle of the 11th century.

HISTORICAL ENEMIES

FEUDAL NAVARRESE

1035 TO 1327 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

On his death in 1035, Sancho III divided his possessions among his four sons. García Sánchez III received Navarre. Ferdinand received the County of Castile and after the Battle of Tamarón in 1037 was able to unite Castile with León as king Ferdinand I. The relationship between García and Ferdinand deteriorated and ended when García was killed at the Battle of Atapuerca, in September 1054. García was succeeded by Sancho IV who was murdered in 1076. Alfonso VI of León and Castile took control of much of Navarre whilst Sancho Ramirez of Aragon took control of the rest of the territory. This led to a period of Aragonese expansion. To the south the border was moved to the Ebro River, Zaragoza was taken in 1118 and Tudela in 1119. The status quo between Aragon and Castile stood until the 1134. Navarre chose Garcia Ramirez as King. Navarre faced Castilian invasions in 1173 and 1199. By 1200 Western Navarre was in Castilian control. Navarre passed by marriage to the House of Champagne. From 1276 Navarre effectively passed into French control. It then remained in personal union with France until the death of Charles I in 1328.

TROOP NOTES

Navarrese armies consisted of a core of knights supported by infantry.

FEUDAL CASTILE AND LEÓN

1037 TO 1349 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

In 1037, Ferdinand, Navarrese Count of Castile, defeated the King of León and because of his marriage to the King's sister, became king Ferdinand I. The taking of Toledo, the old Visigoth capital, in 1085 by Alfonso VI of León was a turning point in the development of León and Castile and led to a focus on territorial expansion. In 1139 Portugal obtained independence. The two kingdoms of León and Castile were split in 1157, when a major defeat for Alfonso VII of Castile weakened the authority of Castile. When Alfonso IX died in 1230, his son by Berenguela of Castile, Ferdinand III of Castile, invaded León and assumed the crown. The union was not accepted and led to 2 years of revolts. Only in 1301 was the dynastic union of the two kingdoms completed. The two kingdoms retained separate parliaments and laws until the modern era.

TROOP NOTES

The term jinete for light horse only appears in the 13th century. In areas reconquered from the Moors, the cavalry may have fought in Arab style.

ALMORAVID

HISTORICAL NOTES

The first Almoravid campaign occurred in the early 1050s amongst the Lamtuna tribe. The Almoravid (Murabit) sect quickly spread across the Berber tribes of the Sahara. A large area of Morocco, Western Sahara and Mauretania was subdued, and Marrakech founded in 1060. In 1086 Yusuf ibn Tashfin was invited by the Muslim taifa princes of Al-Andalus to defend their territories from the encroachment of Alfonso VI, King of León and Castile. He defeated the Castilians at the Battle of Sagrajas but then chose to return to Africa. He returned in 1090 with the intention of annexing the taifa principalities. Except for Saragossa, this had been achieved by 1094. In 1108 Tamim Al Yusuf defeated the Kingdom of Castile at the Battle of Uclés. Except for Valencia, little territory was recaptured. The Almoravids were victorious at the Battle of Fraga in 1134, killing Alfonso I of Aragon. Defeated at the Battle of Ourique by the forces of León, Lisbon was lost to the Portuguese in 1147. The conquest of the city of Marrakech by the Almohads in 1147 marked the fall of the dynasty.

TROOP NOTES

Lamtuna and Hintata were tribal troops but trained to fight in formation with long spears.

FEUDAL PORTUGUESE

1129 TO 1149 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

. At the end of the 11th century, the Burgundian knight Henry became count of Portugal and defended its independence by merging the County of Portugal and the County of Coimbra. Henry's son Afonso Henriques defeated forces led by his mother. In 1139, he assumed the title King of Portugal after he obtained an overwhelming victory in the Battle of Ourique against the Almoravid governor of Cordoba. In 1143, the Kingdom of León recognised him as King of Portugal by the Treaty of Zamora. In May 1147, a contingent of crusaders left from Dartmouth in England. They had intended to sail directly to the Holy Land, but weather forced the ships to stop on the Portuguese coast, at the northern city of Porto on 16 June 1147. There they were convinced to meet with King Afonso. The crusaders agreed to help the King attack Lisbon, with a solemn agreement that offered to the crusaders the pillage of the city's goods and the ransom money for expected prisoners. After four months, the Moorish rulers agreed to surrender on 24 October, primarily because of hunger within the city.

TROOP NOTES

The Portuguese army at this time was essentially the same as that of León. During an earlier siege of Lisbon (1142), Afonso Henriques, also took advantage of the passage of a group of Anglo-Norman crusaders on their way to the Holy Land.

ALMOHAD

1130 TO 1269 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Almohad state was first established in the Atlas Mountains in around 1120. In 1130 Abd al-Mu'min al-Gumi conquered Marrakesh and declared himself Caliph. He succeeded in overthrowing the ruling Almoravid dynasty by 1147 and then extended his power over all the Maghreb by 1159. All Islamic Iberia was under Almohad rule by 1172. The Almohad dominance of Iberia continued until 1212 when the Almohad army was defeated at the Battle of Las Navas de Tolosa by an alliance of the Christian princes of Castile, Aragon, Navarre and Portugal. Cordoba fell to Christian forces in 1236 and Seville in 1248. The Almohads continued to rule in Africa but lost territories piecemeal and were replaced by the Marinids. The last ruler was murdered by a slave in 1269 in Marrakesh.

TROOP NOTES

The Black Guard were not so effective under the Almohads as they had been under the Almoravids.
Arabs of the Banu Hilal and Sulaym became an important part of the Almohad military after 1153 CE.
Following their defeat at the Battle of Las Navas de Tolosa in 1212 CE the Almohads recruited Christian cavalry.

TAIFA OF MURCIA

1147 TO 1172 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

This list covers the period from 1147 to 1172 when the Taifa of Murcia operated as a separate state after the Almohads had defeated the Almoravids and wrested control over the Moorish principalities in Iberia. It fell to the Almohads in 1172.

TROOP NOTES

Almogavari were border troops. Slav foot were descendants of Mamluk soldiers who fled to Murcia after the capture of Valencia by the Taifa of Toledo in 1074.

EARLY CROWN OF ARAGON

1150 TO 1336 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Crown of Aragon was created in 1150 with the dynastic union resulting from the marriage of the Princess of Aragon Petronilla and the Count of Barcelona Ramon Berenguer IV. Barcelona became the cultural, administrative, and economic centre of the Crown of Aragon. Aragon secured Valencia by renouncing Aragonese rights to annexing Murcia. The Crown had significant influence in the south of France until the Albigensian Crusade brought the region firmly under the control of the King of France. At the Battle of Muret in 1213 Simon de Montfort's French army defeated the Aragonese army of Peter II and Peter himself was killed. By the Treaty of Meaux-Paris in 1229 the Crown of Aragon renounced its rights to these territories.

In 1282 Peter III responded to the request of the Sicilians against the Angevins and landed in Sicily. For the whole of the 14th century, Sicily was essentially an independent kingdom, ruled by relatives of the kings of Aragon, but for all intents and purposes they were Sicilian kings (see the Aragonese Sicilian list).

In 1312, the Catalans in Greece recognized the suzerainty of King Frederick III of Sicily, who appointed his son Manfred as Duke of Athens. The ducal title remained in the hands of the Crown of Aragon until 1388, but actual authority was exercised by a series of vicars-general (see the Catalan Company in Greece list).

TROOP NOTES

The Military Orders in Spain were more numerous than elsewhere but sometimes poorly disciplined. Almughavars were border troops equipped with a couple of iron javelins called sagetes or escones, spear and short sword or dagger. Their fighting style involved missiles combined with a fierce charge.

MEDIEVAL PORTUGUESE

1150 TO 1500 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

The capture of Lisbon in 1147 was followed up with further victories against the Almoravids who were also weakened by the expansion of the Almohads in Africa. Portuguese control expanded southwards. In 1179 the Pope acknowledged Portugal as an independent kingdom.

Between 1193 and 1201 Portugal was engaged in an indecisive struggle with León. Civil war followed during the reign of Afonso II. As the 13th century progressed the Portuguese continued to capture territory in the Algarve. The throne was usurped by Afonso III who secured the power of the monarchy over the church with the backing of the military orders. In 1263 the Portuguese claim to the Algarve was recognised by Castile and the capital became Lisbon.

King Dinis I faced two civil wars but backed by the military orders and by negotiating a commercial treaty with England his position was strengthened. In 1290 the Portuguese knights of the Order of Santiago were separated from the parent Castilian order. After the condemnation of the Templars in 1312, many Templars took refuge in Portugal and the order was maintained under a new name, the Order of Christ, which received the benediction of the Pope in 1319.

In 1340 a strong Portuguese army aided the Castilians in the Battle of the Rio Salado which defeated the Granadines and their Marinid allies.

From 1365 Ferdinand I became embroiled in wars against Castile, partly due to the intrigues of John of Gaunt. When Ferdinand died in 1383, he left no male heir. Ferdinand's illegitimate brother John claimed the throne and had secured it by 1385 despite an invasion from Castile. John ruled until 1433 and during his reign Cueta in Africa was captured from the Marinid sultan of Morocco. Between 1458 and 1471 under Alfonso V, Portugal captured further Moroccan territories. These helped establish Portugal as a trading nation and laid the foundations for the Portuguese empire.

TROOP NOTES

The Portuguese made use of javelinmen armed with a spear as well as javelins. Pits, ditches, and caltrops were used on occasions, such as at the Battle of Ajubarrota in 1385.

BANU GHANIYA

1184 TO 1235 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

When the Almoravids collapsed in 1174 CE, a state was set up in the Balearic Islands under the name Banu Ghaniya. In 1184 they invaded modern Algeria to take back land from the Almohads. They were joined by disaffected Berbers and Arabs.

TROOP NOTES

The army of Banu Ghaniya relied on local resources and alliances with Bedouin and Berber tribes.

HISTORICAL ENEMIES

MEDIEVAL GRANADINE

1228 TO 1492 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

This list covers the armies of the Islamic Spanish states of Murcia and Granada.

The Murcian state formed when the governor Ibn Hud revolted against the Almohads in 1228. It collapsed after he was murdered by a subordinate in 1238.

The Granadine state was founded by Ibn al-Ahmar in 1232 after rebelling against Ibn Hud. Mohammed I ibn Nasr aligned Granada with Ferdinand III of Castile in 1246, creating a tributary state under Castile. At various times it also held the African city of Cueta (opposite Gibraltar). Granada's peace with Castile broke down on various occasions. Granada lost territory to Castile at the Battle of Teba in 1330. In 1340, Granada under Yusuf I supported the failed Marinid invasion of the Iberian Peninsula, which ended at the Battle of Río Salado. The state finally collapsed after a 10 year war in 1492.

TROOP NOTES

Granadine armies were a mixture of native Andalusian troops and African mercenary regiments. The African regiments could be Berber, Sudanese, or sub-Saharan Africans.

HISTORICAL ENEMIES

Feudal Castile and León 5804; Almohad 5807; Early Crown of Aragon 5809; Medieval Portuguese 5810; Marinid and Early Wattasid 5815; Medieval Castilian 5818; Later Castilian 7102.

HAFSID

1229 TO 1500 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Hafsids ruled Ifriqiya (western Libya, Tunisia, and eastern Algeria) from 1229 to 1574. Abu Zakariya, an Almohad governor, declared independence in 1229. Tunis developed as the economic and cultural centre of the kingdom. Many Muslims from Al-Andalus fleeing the Spanish Reconquista of Castile and Aragon were absorbed. The Eighth Crusade was launched by Louis IX of France against the city of Tunis in 1270. It failed after Louis died shortly after arriving on the shores of Tunisia, with his disease-ridden army dispersing back to Europe shortly afterwards. In the 14th century the empire underwent a temporary decline, twice conquered by the Marinids. The Hafsids were able to regain their empire. In 1429, the Hafsids attacked the island of Malta, taking 3,000 slaves.

TROOP NOTES

The Hafsids were forced to rely on the Arab nomads in Tunisia and the distinction between Arab and Berber mostly disappeared.

KINGDOM OF TIEMCEN

1236 TO 1520 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Zayyanid dynasty or Abd al-Wadids ruled the Kingdom of Tiemcien, an area of north-western Algeria. Their rule started when the Almohad Caliphate collapsed. When faced with the threat of Marinid invasion they formed an alliance with the Sultan of Granada and the Kingdom of Castile. The Marinids captured Tiemcien in 1343 and ruled periodically until 1370 but the Marinids found that they were unable to hold the region against local resistance. In the 15th century the kingdom was intermittently a vassal of the Hafsids, the Marinids or Aragon. In 1554 it became a protectorate of the Ottoman Empire.

TROOP NOTES

Like the Hafsids, the Zayyanids came to rely on Arab nomads to supplement local forces.

MARINID AND EARLY WATTASID

1248 TO 1465 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

The Marinid dynasty ruled Morocco from the 13th to the 15th century. In 1244, the Marinid rulers overthrew the Almohad Caliphate. It supported the Kingdom of Granada in the 13th and 14th centuries; an attempt was made to gain a direct foothold on the European side of the Strait of Gibraltar but was defeated at the Battle of Río Salado in 1340. The last Iberian territory was lost after the Castilian conquest of Algeciras in 1344. After the death of Abu Inan Faris in 1358, the real power lay with the viziers. In 1399 Tetouan was sacked and in 1415 the Portuguese captured Cueta. Sultan Abdalhaqq II was executed in 1465 after trying to break the control of the Wattasids. The last Marinid Sultan was overthrown in 1471 and the Wattasid dynasty took power.

TROOP NOTES

The Marinid army was large and disciplined. At its height it may have been able to call upon 40,000 Zenata cavalry, while Arab nomads contributed to the cavalry and Andalusians were included as archers. The personal bodyguard of the sultan consisted of 7,000 men, and included Christian, Kurdish, and Black African elements.

MEDIEVAL NAVARRESE

HISTORICAL NOTES

This list covers the armies of the Kingdom of Navarre from the ascension of the Philip III as co-ruler with his wife Joan II in 1328. Charles IV of France who was also Charles I of Navarre was the last direct Capetian King of France. Philip III supported his cousin, Philip of Valois in the Hundred Years' War but then joined the crusade against the Kingdom of Granada during which he died. When Joan II died in 1349, she was succeeded by her son Charles III known as Charles the Bad. Charles managed to end up being trusted by neither the English nor the French. His claim to the Burgundian throne after the death of his second cousin, Philip I, Duke of Burgundy in 1361 was quickly dismissed. His attempts to expand his territories in both France and Spain backfired and by 1379 he had lost his French possessions and Navarre had been devastated and impoverished by war. Charles III set about improving the infrastructure of his kingdom and mending strained relations with France.

TROOP NOTES

Medieval Navarrese armies tended to rely on a greater proportion of mercenaries as the resources of Navarre itself were somewhat limited.

CROWN OF ARAGON

1336 TO 1479 CE

HISTORICAL NOTES

This list covers the mainland armies of the Crown of Aragon from the coronation of Pere IV in 1336 until the dynastic union in 1479. By 1420 the Aragonese Kingdom of Sardinia finally extended throughout the island having taken nearly a century to achieve. The Greek possessions were permanently lost to Nerio I Acciaioli in 1388, but the Kingdom of Naples was added finally in 1442 by the conquest led by Alfonso V.

TROOP NOTES

Spanish armies were influenced from the 1365 by the involvement of the English and French in the affairs of Spain.

MEDIEVAL CASTILIAN

HISTORICAL NOTES

Pedro (Peter) I of Castile succeeded his father in 1350 CE and ruled until 1369. From 1356 to 1366, Pedro engaged in constant wars with Aragon. In 1366 his bastard brother, Henry of Trastámara, led an army of free company soldiers against Pedro. Pedro abandoned the kingdom and eventually sought refuge with the Edward, the Black Prince. Edward restored him to the throne after the Battle of Nájera in 1367 but left Spain after Pedro had failed to pay his costs. Henry of Trastámara returned to Castile in September 1368. Henry and Pedro met in battle at Montiel. Pedro's army was beaten, and he took refuge in the fortress. Pedro was betrayed by Du Guesclin who was Henry's envoy and killed by Henry himself. Henry and his successor John I then went to war against Portugal and England in the Hundred Years' War. They had to fight off the attempts of John of Gaunt, to claim the Castilian throne in right of his second wife, Pedro's daughter. The defeats John I suffered in Trancoso and at the Battle of Aljubarrota in May and August 1385 had ended any possibility of his reigning as king of Portugal. John II ruled from 1406 to 1454, his uncle Ferdinand I of Aragon ruled as regent for much of his minority. The marriage of Ferdinand II of Aragon and Isabella I of Castile, in 1469, began, a familial union of the two kingdoms.
